Mutilated Girl Grilled As Detectives Attempt To 'Blow Lid Off' Story

Alleged Branding Victim Literally Carried to Headquarters.

Called Notorious At Home as Hoaxer

2 Hunted in New York, 1 Here; Fourth Man Is Under Arrest.

Balked at every turn by a maze of tangled clews and frankly skeptical of her bizarre story, the police shortly before last midnight whisked 21-year-old Margaret Louise Bell, auburn-haired puppet of a New York vice ring, into a private office at headquarters to "blow the lid off" her fantastic tale of a mutilation attack.

Inspector Bernard W. Thompson, detective chief, after learning of a series of hoaxes admittedly perpetrated several years ago by the woman in her home town of Lakeland, Fla., announced he would "break the case if it took all night."

After a day-long and fruitless investigation of countless leads, he ordered the alleged attack victim, who claimed she was marked for death by the New York mob of Charles ("Lucky") Luciano, jailed vice overlord, to be brought to his office from the Police Women's Bureau.

Carried to Headquarters.

In custody of Detective Sergt. J. K. Baker, the Bell woman was literally carried into the headquarters bulding. Her titan hair streamed down her neck and the detective covered her face with a towel to shield her from photographers. She was forced to climb two flights of stairs after entering from a rear basement door and half-way to the second floor collapsed in the officer's arms.

Baker grasped her beneath the arms and assisted her down a long hallway into Inspector Thompson's office. There, behind locked doors, she faced questioning by both Washington and New York investigators.

A short time before the Bell woman reached headquarters, two of the five detectives assigned to investigate her story accompanied New York authorities on a futile, downtown search for a man identi- occupied an apartment with her, fied as Tony Costello, who recently The reputed mutilation victim also has been known under the name of Costello and police believed he could aid their probe.

Called Her to Office.

It was immediately following the futile Costello search that Inspector Thompson, determined to grill the woman until "broke," summoned her ot his office.

Reports from Lakeland first prompted police to scout the woman's story. Earlier in the day, Inspector Thompson said he was reasonably sure she was the victim of an "assault with intent to murder." Conflicting reports of the woman's former escapades led to the midnight grilling.

According to Lakeland authorities—and Margaret Bell reportedly admitted they were right—she has been implicated in numerous criminal hoaxes since 1931. She has a record of fabrications, Florida officials reported, starting with her venile courts when she was 16.

first appearance in Lakeland ju- At that time she accused a colored porter in a hotel where she was a waitress of making improper advances. Investigation, however, proved there was no basis for the charge. According to the records, she is the daughter of S. R. Bell, but whose name is not in the current city directory of Lakeland.

Shot Herself in 1931.

In 1931, she was sent to Savannah, Ga., to live with an uncle, J. Y. Bell. She claimed he mistreated her, and in August of that year shot herself in the abdomen.

She returned to Lakeland, records reveal, and later went to Melbourne to work in a hotel in March, 1932. A. Harry Fielding, operator of the hotel, madeinquiries of her at Bartow, saying he had dismissed her for misconduct, and that he had

Family Wiped Out, Home Fired; Deed Laid to Deranged Woman

Divorcee Crazed by Illness Soaked Bodies of Three Relatives With Kerosene Before Turning Gun on Self in Virginia, Is Police Theory.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., July 13.—A sick woman—a mother and a divorcee—probably tip-toed through her mountain home with a shotgun at dawn this morning, killed her mother, her two children and then ended her own life, acting Coroner A. P. Osborne, who is investigating the death of four members of a Clarke County family, said tonight.

However because doubt has arisen in many minds as to how the four met their death, the prosecuting attorney, E. McC. Williams, announced the coroner's inquest, set for ten a. m. tomorrow, had been postponed until further evidence can be gotten. No date has been set.

Coroner Osborne said he believed Mrs. May Smallwood, deranged by ill health, killed her mother, Mrs. Joseph (Virginia) Elsea, a bed-ridden woman of 90, her two children, Elbert, 23, and Elkin, 17, and then pressed the shotgun to her own body and fired.

But before she killed herself she soaked the bodies of her dead children and her mother with kerosene. Then she set fire to their bodies.

Two men who rose at dawn to go to work found the bodies when they saw smoke spurting from the windows of the mountain home. Mrs. Elsea was still alive but died before aid could be brought.

Joe Elsea, brother of Mrs. Smallwood, and Gilbert Fowler, found the bodies. They battered the door

Jobless Relief Deadlock Ends In Pennsylvania

Factions in Senate Agree to Vote $45,000,000; Idle Storm Capitol.

By the Associated Press.

Harrisburg, Pa., July 13.—Republicans and Democrats in the Pennsylvania Senate ended their long deadlock over unemployment relief amid the cheers of hundreds of unemployed men and women who stormed the Capitol.

They agreed to appropriate $45,000,000 for relief until the end of January. The agreement was reached in separate caucuses.

Senate leaders said an effort would be made to rush through a bill to permit transfer of $3,000,000 from special funds for relief until the end of July. The administration has opposed further transfer.

Senators also asserted several tax bills would be released by committees tonight to assure the relief revenue.

Hundreds of jobless men and women had stormed the doors of the Senate, jeered and booed from the galleries and threatened:

"We'll take the Capitol over if you don't do something soon."

Maj. Lynn G. Adams, superintendent of the State police, and picked details of troopers kept other

Foes Injecting Racial Issues, Hamilton Says

Cites Support of Jews; Farley Accuses Papers of Coloring News.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 13.—Republican Chairman John D. M. Hamilton and Democratic Chairman James A. Farley today fired their first political broadsides since the opening of their campaign headquarters here.

Hamilton, stopping over before a swing through New England, accused the Democrats of injecting racial and religious issues into the campaign.

Farley, at a first press conference, charged that anti-Roosevelt newspapers were coloring their news to make it appear that the President was losing popular support.

The Republican leader asserted the Democrats were spreading propaganda in the East that Gov. Alf M. Landon and himself were anti-Jewish and were spreading reports in the West that Landon's middle name, Mossman, was Jewish.

"They're playing botht ends against the middle, he declared.

He said both he and Landon had strong Jewish and Catholic support in Kansas and had vigorously fought for religious and racial toi-

Noose Slips, Indian Murderer Chokes 33 Minutes at Hanging

By the Associated Press.

San Carlos, Ariz., July 13.—Earl Gardner, feared Apache killer, paid with his life in ghastly fashion at dawn today on a gallows hidden in a deep and rugged canyon almost at the base of Coolidge Dam.

For 33 agonizing minutes Gardner dangled at the end of the noose before he was pronounced dead.

Heavily-armed officers guarded the scaffold and roads approaching it to forestall the possibility of a demonstration by Gardner's fellow tribesmen.

If there had been any plan on the part of the Apaches to express their disapproval of the execution, the heavy guard prevented it, U. S. Marshal Ben J. McKinney said.

The execution, instead of provoking the wrath of the Indians, Federal officials held, served as a "warning" that bloodshed on the reservation would not be tolerated.

The 31-year-old Indian, who hacked his wife and infant son to death with a hatchet, went to his

Suspect Flees Alabama Mob; Troops Called

Woods Are Searched for Fugitive Accused of Attacking Woman.

Escapes After Shooting Posseman; Is Believed to Be Wounded.

Posses Seeking Three.

Two companies of the Alabama National Guard were sent last night into the Weavers Cave area, where a mob of 500 were scouring the woods for a colored man accused of attacking a white woman.

A posse of several score of armed men searched near Toccopola, Miss., last night for a colored man after his alleged attempt to assault a white woman.

Near Plymouth, Mass., 200 citizens combed the meadows last night for a man who attacked a 19-year-old girl.

Troops Are Called.

By the United Press.

Anniston, Ala., July 13.—Two companies of the Alabama National Guard moved into the Weavers Cave area at double time tonight to prevent violence to an armed colored man suspected of attacking a white woman.

Mobilization of the troops—a machine gun company from Jacksonville, and an infantry unit from Gadsden—was ordered at 5:40 p. m. by Adjt. Gen. John C. Coleman.

The troops moved swiftly as an outraged mob of nearly 500 Alabamans scoured woodlands for the man, who allegedly attacked a white woman and shot down a posseman.

The man is accused of assaulting Mrs. Lula Mae Hill, 25-year-old farmwife, at her isolated home near here. Shortly after the assault, he shot J. A. Hicks, a farmer.

Believed Wounded.

He fired a shotgun charge into the farmer's thighs and legs from 40 paces while Hicks' companion snapped a shotgun three times ineffectually at close range.

Although his companion's gun refused to fire, Hicks answered the Negro's shots with his own shotgun, and it was believed he wounded the suspect superficially.

With feeling running high as the posse closed in on the fugtituve, Gen. Coleman hurried here from Montgomery and took command of the situation.

"No matter how serious the crime involved, it is my duty to protect a suspect from possible violence and insure him a fair trial," Coleman said as he called the troops. "And I propose to protect this man."

As the troops moved in, Capt. Potter Smith, of the State highway patrol, arrived with 15 State policemen. Lieut. Col. John Moore, assistant State adjutant, also was here with a military staff of 12 enlisted men, and he threw his group immediately into the field.

Gen. Coleman ordered the armed possemen who had hunted the accused attacker in a day-long drive through heavily wooded country gradually to withdraw from the area as the troops took over.

Armed militiamen will penetrate the heavy thicket seeking the man, he said.

As he took command, the posse of 500 men, led by baying bloodhounds, was closing in from two directions on the swampy copse where the armed man was believed cowering. One group was led by Calhoun County Sheriff Pete Cotton.

Another group was headed by

One-Armed Golfer Scores Hole-in-One On 234-Yd. Drive

A one-armed golfer made a hole-in-one yesterday!

Al Howard, 51-yearold Washington Golf and Country Club player, who has only the use of his right hand, provided one for the books when he scored and ace on the 234-yard fourteenth hole of his home course—long considered one of the most treacherous one-shotters in the Middle Atlantic section.

Believed to be the only one-armed golfer in modern golf history to negotiate a par 3 hole in one stroke, Howard added luster to his achievement by using—of all clubs—a driver.

The fourteenth at Washington seldom has been "aced," due to its unusual length, the ditches that dot the left side of the fairway and the right of the green, placing a premium on extreme accuracy.

A former District tennis champion, a star second baseman on the old Business High baseball team more than three decades ago, Howard made his hole-in-one in a competitive round. The occasion was the Kiwanis Club tournament, and Howard, oddly enough, was one of the hosts.

Playing with him in the foursome were C. H. (Pete Pardoe, Berge Hartz and Charlie German. There wasn't the slightest breeze blowing when the husky 200-pounder stepped up to the fourteenth tee and walloped the ball straight as an arrow. The ball alighted 20 feet in front of the green, bounced onto the carpet and slowly trickled into the cup.

This, according to his playing companions, was too much for Howard, for on the next hole he took no less than seven strokes. The ace, however, enabled him to shoot an 88.

For a two-armed golfer a hole-in-one is a 750,000-to-1 shot. For a golfer with one arm it must be a million to one.

Peek Praises Landon Farm, Trade Planks

First AAA Chief Silent on Whether He Will Aid Campaign.

Says Protective Tariff System Is Menaced by New Deal.

By the Associated Press.

Topeka, Kans., July 13.—Voicing approval of the farm and foreign trade platform planks on which Alf M. Landon seeks the Presidency, George N. Peek told newsmen today he was not yet ready to say whether he would campaign for the Republican nominee.

Peek, first administrator of the New Deal's AAA and later foreign trade adviser to President Roosevelt, arrived shortly before noon to confer with Landon. He brought a bulging brief case and, after a late luncheon with Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas, headed for the Governor's Mansion.

"Are you going to campaign for Landon?" Peek was asked as he stepped off his train.

"I haven't got that far yet," he replied.

"Planks Sufficiently Broad."

But when questioned about the Republican platform, Peek, who has been a bitter critic of Secretary Hull's reciprocal tariff policies, said:

"I think the Republican platform on farm and foreign trade, the subjects in which I was most vitally interested, is sufficiently broad to cover the things I think ought to be done."

(The agricultural plank favors disposing of surpluses "by bargaining for foreign markets selectively by countries both as to exports and imports." The tariff plank favors repeal of the reciprocal tariff law and restoration of "th principle of the flexible tariff.")

Peek's criticism of the New Deal's reciprocal policy has been directed especially at the most-favored-nation clause by which benefits granted one nation in a tariff treaty are extended all countries with which the United States has most-favored-nation treaties.

"Under this program," Peek said today, "we are drifting toward a complete breakdown of the protective system."

Interest Declared High.

The former New Dealer said there was "a great deal of interest in the election, an unusual interest for so early in the campaign."

"I think the people are waiting very anxiously to hear what Gov. Landon is going to say in his acceptance address and in subsequent speeches," he said. "I think the farmers are going to rely more upon the statements of the candidates than upon the platforms."

Landon received Peek after lunching with Alfred H. Kirchhofer, new publicity director of the Republican National Committee, and Hill Blackett, the committee's director of public relations. Earlier, at his office, the Governor talked with Prof. Irving Fisher, of Yale, economist, who favors managed currency, and Bernarr Macfadden, the publisher.

On Landon's calling list for tomorrow was former Senator John Thomas, of Idaho, and E. G. Bennett, of Ogden, Utah. Bennett, a business associate of Marriner S. Eccles, governor of the Federal Reserve Board, was the Republican member of the three-man board first named to direct the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

Fisher declined to discuss his interview with Landon. He told newsmen he hoped that Eccles

Dominican Envoy Denounces Movie Of 'Dictatorship'

Dominican Minister Andres Pastoriza yesterday made oral representations to the State Department against motion picture portrayals of the character of "Generalissimo" Rafael Trujillo, president of the Dominican Republic.

His action came after a dramatization of the dictator's career had been eliminated from the current release of "The March of Time" at Radio City Music Hall, in New York.

The Dominican Consul in New York was annoyed because the story pictured Trujillo as "Dictator of the tightest little tyranny in the Caribbean," an re-enacted one murder alleged to have been instigated by him.

"We cannot afford to offend a friendly nation," was the only comment of W. G. Van Schmus, manager of the theater.

Senor Pastoriza conversed informally with Secretary of State Hull here, and called the department's attention to the film, which depicted Trujillo's rise from a non-commissioned officer to his present post.

The diplomat particularly stressed the murder scene, laid in New York, when a Dominican exile was shot, allegedly because the assassin mistook him for Angel Morales, a former minister, now in exile.

Senor Pastoriza was particularly emphatic in saying no formal protest had been made.

"March of Time" editors declared that the film story is a true picture of conditions. They said that since the picture was made they have not been able to find any Dominican who could point to an error of fact in the story. Their facts, they said, were checked by their own investigators, but were fully borne out by reports of press association correspondents, and by the Foreign Policy Association.

86 Aged Patients Die Of Heat in Michigan As Toll Reaches 390

Death Every 10 Minutes Reported in Detroit; Hospitals Taxed.

Conditions Called Worst in 16 Years

Women, Children Crowd Morgue Seeking Word of Relatives.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, July 13.—Michigan, sweltering in a heat wave more prolonged than any in its history counted 390 deaths tonight attributed directly or indirectly to the six-day siege of 100-degree weather.

In the Detroit area, 108 deaths were reported in a 14-hour period, 23 of them at Eloise County Hospital, as the mercury rose to 101 degrees. The highest mark reported in the State was at Saginaw, with 109.

Dr. T. K. Gruber, superintendent of the Eloise institution, revealed today for the first time the devastating toll of the intense heat upon aged and infirm patients there. He announced 86 patients had died since last Wednesday.

All the deaths, he declared, were attributable to the heat. Most of the patients were aged, suffering from debilitative disease.

A similar situation among the aged was reported tonight from St. Paul, Minn., where five women, residents in a home conducted by the Little Sisters of the Poor, died within eight hours from the effects of the heat. They ranged from 66 to 94 years in age.

Detroit's Morgue last night was filled to its capacity of 280 for the first time in its history.

The temporary resting place of the dead was visited throughout the day by hundreds of anxious persons, hunting for missing relatives.

Facilities Are Taxed.

Hospital facilities in Detroit were taxed to the utmost as physicians, nurses and orderlies stayed on throughout the day reviving hundreds of persons suffering from prostration. Receiving Hospital, where emergency cases were received, converted corridors into temporary wards, and at times the deaths were so numerous there was no time to remove them to the morgue. The hospital, with a 600 capacity, had 637 patients today.

Officials estimated that for the period from midnight to 2 p. m. today a heat death occurred in Detroit every ten minutes.

At Wayne County Morgue, where 100 bodies were received in a day, many unidentified, the scene resembled that of a catastrophe. Women and children wept as they sought word of missing relatives. Dr. W. T. Ryan, chief medical examiner, declared "I have never seen anything like it in 16 years' of experience here." With three assistants, Dr. Ryan performed 150 autopsies within 36 hours.

In out-State Michigan 123 deaths from heat and drowning were well scattered, but the lower peninsula broiled as the mercury soared to new records at many points.

High mark of the day was reported at Saginaw, where a reading of 111 degrees at 3:40 p. m. established a new all-time high-temperature record for the State. The previous record was 110 at Bay City July 2, 1911.

101 at Muskegon.

Muskegon, almost invariably cooled by lake winds, experienced a record high of 101 degrees; Grand Rapids, 107; Flint, 107; Adrian, 106, and Jackson, 106.

Despite the heat, most Detroit factories were able to keep up production without change in schedule, but all said the condition of workers was being observed closely. A few cases of prostration were reported.

General Motors Corporation announced today that all its 65 factory managers had been instructed to poll their men to determine whether they desired to lay off.

The Bohn Aluminum Co. reported several of its plants closed and the remainder working only enough men to keep parts moving to customers.

The Weather Bureau gave Michigan no promise of relief tomorrow. The forecast was for continued fair weather and heat.

Broker Weds Adelaide Moffett At Civil Ceremony in New York

Daughter of Former Housing Administrator Becomes Bride of David Brooks; Announced Betrothal Year Ago to Henry Gibbins, jr.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 13.—Miss Adelaide Moffett, 23, daughter of James A. Moffett, former Federal Housing Administrator, became the bride today of David Brooks, 28, a broker.

Previously engaged to Henry Gibbins, jr., son of a brigadier general, Miss Moffett had planned careers at various times as a night club singer, a radio singer and a nurse.

A year ago last April her engagement to Gibbins was announced Journally in Washington. Today she and Brooks elected to ... the services of City Clerk Michael J. Cruise for the marriage ceremony in the chapel of the Municipal Building.

She had studied nursing at the Russell Sage College, Troy, N. Y., and after her debut, sang in a Miami night club. Friends understood that her engagement to Gibbins was broken off a short time after it was announced.

Drought Relief Fund Increased To $3,393,000

Tugwell Hears Reports of Aids; Wallace Denies Food Shortage.

By Sidney Olson.

While Secretary of Agriculture Wallace last night was assuring the Nation "there is no likelihood now of anything approaching a national food shortage," Resettlement Adminstrator Rexford G. Tugwell after hearing first hand reports of drought area conditions, promptly increased the RA's direct dole fund from $393,000 to $3,393,000, almost tenfold

Secretary Wallace, speaking over the radio from Colorado Springs, Colo., denounced those "who are using the drought as an excuse to increase their profits." He said the country is much better supplied with food for livestock than it was in 1934; that there is an ample supply of vegetables and other food, and "there is no panicky feeling like that which appeared two years ago as the great drought settled down." Those who are boosting prices now because of the drought, he said, "are taking advantage of human misery."

He replied to criticism of the crop adjustment program and called "naive" the impression that the huge surpluses of 1932 and 1935 still would be available as a reserve supply had it not been for the adjustment program. He insisted the country would have had adjustment just the same, "partly by the drought and partly by the bankruptcy of the hundreds of thou-

Showers Check Heat in West; Capital Is Cool

'Certain Break' Is on Way, Meteorologists Say, as Mercury Falls.

Long-awaited showers fell over portions of the drought-baked Dakotas and western Minnesota late last night, with a cold air moving eastward, causing Government meterologists at St. Paul to say a "certain break' in the heat wave, which has claimed 1,580 lives, was on the way.

The showers, some light, but many heavy, brought relief in streets and fields around Williston, Jamestown, Bismarck, Fullerton, Minot, Fargo and other North Dakota points.

Certain Break in Heat.

At Fergus Falls, Minn., there was a steady three-quarter hour rain, with citizens leaning from windows and walking hatless on the streets to greet it.

The rain brought the temperature to the lowest point registered since the 11-day wave of tropical weather began. At Aberdeen, S. Dak., where a .30 precipitation was recorded, the mercury toppled from 106 to 79 degrees.

Airport weather men in St. Paul, reporting on the basis of observations made by the western stations of the United States Department of Commerce, said:

"Denses cool air in a layer has moved into the drought region from the Northwest.

"This means a certain break in the heat stage—no guesswork connected with it now.

While Washington and its environs experienced a day of respite,

Cohen's Music Makes Him 'Hot,' So P. O. Becomes a Hot-Cha Spot

By the United Press.

Beautiful thoughts, hot-cha-cha and ladies who get their inspiration from heaven turned the Postoffice Department into a pretty good imitation of a night club yesterday.

There wasn't anything to drink except water, but there was a miniature piano and Harry Cohen to play it, a witty master of ceremonies in the person of Solicitor W. C. O'Brien, and Miss Alma Becker, giggly composer of love lyrics.

Cohen was on trial on charges of being a fraud. He operates the Universal Song Service, of Hollywood, Calif., which accepts song poems from amateurs, writes music for them and offers the result for sale to the movies. The fee is $50 a song.

For 17 years Miss Becker has been spending her days as a stenographer for a firm of Washington lawyers and her evenings writing poems of love. On New Year's Day she saw an advertisement of Cohen's in a movie magazine and

Aids of States Cite Obstacles In Lemke Race

Task of Placing His Name on Ballots Reported by Secretaries.

By the Associated Press.

Albany, N. Y., July 13.—Formidable difficulties beset Representative William Lemke's third party candidacy for President in several States, delegates to the National Association of Secretaries of State reported today.

At the same time in New York City Supreme Court Justice Charles McLaughlin approved a certificate of incorporation for the North Dakota's Union Party.

While the certificate did not specifically name Lemke, Attorney John A. Miller, who offered it, said the New York State organization was for Lemke and that papers would be filed in the secretary of State's office here today or tomorrow.

Some delegates to the secretaries' nineteenth annual meeting in the capital declared the requirements for placing Lemke's Union Party ticket on ballots in their States are "relatively simple."

But Edward J. Hughes, secreary of State, said the Union Party there was "faced with two obstacles."

"First," he declared, "an attempt is being made by a group of Illinois voters to file a slate of candidates for a Union Party, although according to Illinois sources, its supporters are entirely unrelated to the Lemke group.

"This means undoubted confusion in the circulating of petitions and in balloting on election day.

"Furthermore, a rigid requirement for filing petitions makes it doubly difficult to place Lemke's name on the ballot. The Illinois law requires a minimum of 25,000 petitioners. At least 200 must be secured in each of 50 of the down-State counties and the balance in Cook County (Chicago)."

Robert A. Gray, Florida secretary and president of the national association, and George H. Heffner, statistician of the Ohio Department of State, both said their States were "satisfied with just two parties—Democrats and Republicans."

Neffner said he had informed representatives of the Union Party that if they "wanted to file a ticket on the ballot with a circle over it in Ohio they would have to have approximately 330,000 signatures."

On the other hand, Louis Cappelli, Rhode Island secretary of State, and Frederick W. Cook, secretary of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, said that only 500 and 1,000 petitioners, respectively, would be required to place a third party on the ballots in their States.

Gov. Lehman was guest of honor at a dinner for the visiting secretaries tonight in the Gideon Putnam Hotel on the State reservation at Saratoga Springs.

Tomorrow the delegates will motor to West Point, stopping en route to be greeted by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt at Hyde Park. The final two days' sessions will be held in New York City.

11 Maine Candidates Ruled Out in Races

Augusta, Me., July 13 (AP).—Two Communists, two Farmer-Labor, one Independent-Democrat, five Socialists and one Union Party member were ruled out of the Maine September general election by the secretary of State's department today.

Backed, he said, by opinions from the attorney general's office, Deputy Secretary of State Frederick Robie in charge of elections declared the petitions lacked sufficient signatures, did not have proper certification, addresses were wrong and abbreviations were used.

The petitions excluded the following party candidates: Dr. B. Lake Noyes, Stonington, Union Party candidate for United States Senator; Frank H. Maxfield, Gray, Socialist, for Governor; Helen E. Knudsen, Gray, Socialist, for United States Senator; Harold F. Meserve, Biddeford, and Hazen S. Taylor, Anson, Socialists, for United States Representative; John A. Marsh, Dixfield, Socialist, for State senator; William G. Hapgood, Madison, Communist, for Governor, and Daniel E. Bishop, of Portland, Communist, for United States Senator; Robert Brochu and Daniel T. Hickey, both of Biddeford, Farmer-Labor, for State Legislature.

Chain Store Units Agree to Reforms

The National Co-operative Council said yesterday pledges made by chain-store groups representing 22,000 retail outlets had resulted in a distinct gain toward elimination of what it said were objectionable trade policies in the distribution of food products.

The council said it had sought marketing reforms through the ruling out of brokerage payments to buyers, unearned advertising allowances, unreasonable quantity discounts and the use of agricultural commodities as "loss leaders."

Robin Hood, secretary of the council, reported that the Food and Grocery Chains Stores of America, Inc., had pledged it would bar the merchandising practices long opposed by agricultural groups.

erance when the Ku Klux Klan was a political issues in Kansas politics.

Farley, at his press conference, two hours before that of Hamilton, commented on a statement by Paul Block, newspaper publisher, charging the Democrats with persuading Gov. Herbert H. Lehman of New York to seek a third term to swing the Jewish vote to President Roosevelt.

"I'm really sorry that Paul Block should attempt to indicate that the people of New York ought to vote against a great public servant like Gov. Lehman," Farley said.

Hamilton later was asked if he thought the racial question would be injected into the campaign.

"It looks like the Democrats have already injected it," Hamilton said. "Since they have made it an issue, we may as well get the facts into the open."

He said he had fought in the Legislature against legislation which would have recognized the Klan; had been elected to the speakership of the lower House on an anti-Klan platform; and had participated in the anti-Klan campaign of William Allen White for Governor in 1924 on an independent ticket.

Gov. Landon refused to support the Republican candidate, who was indorsed by the Klan, Hamilton said, and supported White.

"Reference has been made," he said, "to the question of Jewish recognition in the choosing of the party leadership. The Republican organization is not going to be stampeded into building an organization on racial and religious lines. I pick men for what they do in politics—not for the color of their hair or where they go to church."

The racial question, he said, "is a dangerous thing to throw into any campaign, and I tried to keep it out just as I did the farm issue."

"It's one thing for a man in New York to say he's against religious intolerance," he declared, "and another thing to say it when hooded men come up to your door as they did in the West."

Asked if he had seen any indications that sentiment for President Roosevelt was declining, Farley said:

"The demonstration given the President here last Saturday gives a pretty fair idea of how the people will vote in November. There has never been any doubt in my mind as to how the man on the street feels. Hundreds of people stop me on the street as I go around and tell me they are for the President and the program he is directing.

"There is really nothing wrong except that newspapers, who oppose the Administration, have colored their articles in an attempt to make it appear that sentiment is different than it actually is.

"There is no doubt but President Roosevelt will have a substantial majority in New York State and that will be true all over the country. I don't care who the Republicans nominate for Governor, Lehman will get a huge majority and the President will get at least as many votes as he got in 1932."

Hamilton, when told of Farley's prediction, said:

"Landon will come nearer carrying New York by that figure than President Roosevelt."

Farley announced the appointment of Daniel J. Tobin, president of the International Teamsters' union, as chairman of the labor division of the Democratic National Committee, a position he held in the 1932 campaign.

Another development was the indorsement of President Roosevelt by a committee of the New York State Federation of Labor, composed of George Meany, president; John P. O'Hanlon, secretary, and Joseph P. Ryan, vice president.

The Roosevelt campaign leaders, Farley said, likewise are not "disturbed" by the Lemke third party candidacy.

Farley said there would probably be a branch speakers' bureau in some Western city.

Hamilton left tonight with a group of Eastern Republican leaders for Portland, Me., the first stop on his Eastern tour.

He was accompanied by Miss Natalie Couch, director of the women's division for the Eastern campaign; Mrs. Worthington Scranton, of Scranton, Pa., vice chairman of the national committee, and Kenneth Bradley, chairman of the young Republican voters unit for the Eastern division.

The group will join Representative Joseph W. Martin, Eastern campaign manager, in Portland.

They planned to visit leaders in Bangor during the afternoon.

Retailers Alarmed Over Administration Hints of Interest in Co-operative Movement.

By Franklyn Waltman

ALARM in a mild sort of way appears to be spreading through the retail distribution industry over recent hints thrown out by the Roosevelt Administration that it is rapidly developing a deep interest in the co-operative consumer movement.

WALTMAN.

In some quarters the view prevails that should President Roosevelt be re-elected a program for what is termed a "co-operative commonwealth" would be the next white rabbit to be pulled from the New Deal high hat. Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace in his recent book, "Whose Constitution," hints at as much.

This country has had producer and consumer co-operatives for 50 years or more, without either attaining any widespread and permanent success. Farmers' co-operatives for the selling of their products made substantial progress during the '20s and up to the depression. But since then they have had to be bailed out by the Government—which put many of them in a hole—and attention chiefly was concentrated on the AAA program for farm relief.

Early this year there appeared an interesting account of the consumer co-operative system in Sweden under the title of "Sweden: The Middle Way," by Marquis Childs, a member of the Washington staff of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. It came at a time when the New Dealers were searching around for a new plan for the salvation of America. They were a little slow in hooking onto the Childs' book but, finally getting around to it, they have become, it seems, fascinated with the idea of the "co-operative commonwealth" for America.

The first public manifestation of this latest of New Deal interests came several weeks ago when President Roosevelt dispatched a three-man commission to Europe to study the co-operative systems there—particularly in Sweden.

This commission, comprising Jacob Baker, assistant WPA administrator; Leland Olds, secretary of the New York Power Authority, and Charles E. Stuart, a consulting engineer, who has done work for the Soviets and more recently has served as vice president of the New Deal Export-Import Bank, last week arrived in England, spent two days looking over the "co-operative system" there and continued on to Sweden.

While this commission was en route to Europe the Democratic National Convention met and adopted a platform plank which read: "We will act to secure to the consumer fair value, honest sales, and a decreased spread between the price he pays and the price the producer receives." Although vague in its terminology this plank immediately recalled that a commission to study the co-operative system was on its way to Europe.

Finally within the last two weeks there has come from the press Secretary Wallace's new book. In the last chapter, captioned "There Is an American Way," he makes a few observations far more interesting to some persons than what he had to say regarding the Constitution.

"In the economic world it is inevitable," asserts Mr. Wallace in that chapter, "that more and more emphasis is going to be laid on the idea of co-operation as distinguished from free competition. The only way in which democracy can survive the logical onslaught of the dictator-state aspect of Communism and Fascism is to develop the genuine co-operative ideal to the limit.

"Producers' co-operatives are not enough. For the most part they merely take the place of middle men, and while in many cases they save a substantial part of the middle man's profit for the producer, they do not have any very profound effect on the people whom they serve. The co-operative way of life must pervade the community, and this means there must be consumers' co-operatives as well as producers' co-operatives."

A little farther on Secretary Wallace declares that "today we need a great many more persons who will become as deeply motivated by the idea of a co-operative economic society as the young men of 1776 and 1787 were motivated by the idea of a democratic political society."

"The one is the living stream of thought for the twentieth century as the other was for the eighteenth," he continues. "I believe the majority of American people are already receptive to the general purposes and possibilities of a co-operative commonwealth. They want more security in sickness, in old age, in unemployment; they want a wider distribution of the good things in life; and they have become disillusioned of the system, in its present self-contradicting form, of free-competition-and-devil-take-the-hindmost as a method for reaching those ends."

These events, each viewed in the light of the other, have disturbed the leaders of the retail distribution industry. Some of them see them as forecasting an onslaught on their livelihood and the profit-system generally. The National Association of Retail Clothiers and Furnishers, for instance, has issued a rallying call through its organ, National Clothier, to be on guard against the movement.

Allen Sinsheimer, editor of National Clothier, demands to know what the Democratic platform plank which refers to consumers means. On behalf of his association he demands to know whether this plank "speaks in favor of the establishment of consumer co-operative in the United States," and if so, how the Roosevelt Administration proposes to go about fostering them.

He points out that "consumer co-operatives, desirable or otherwise, constitute a form of pure socialism," and he wants to know: "Will our Government deliberately or unwittingly sacrifice the small independent merchant by fostering consumer co-operatives?" He wants to know whether small business must again go through the "same ordeal" it suffered under NRA.

After citing what he believes would be the effect of consumer co-operatives on the small merchant, the editor of National Clothier urges that retailers become active at once in seeking to block such a program, contending that "retailing faces the most critical threat to its future existence."

Perhaps we should all defer judgment until President Roosevelt makes clearer his intentions—and that he should do before the election. The time has passed when another NRA scheme can be sprung on the country overnight and justified by a vaguely worded statement, such as appears in the Democratic platform.

Flood Control Action Pledged By President

Confers With Group Before Leaving for Maine on Cruise.

By the Associated Press.

Hyde Park, N. Y., July 13.—President Roosevelt turned longing vacation eyes toward Maine tonight after promising a delegation of the United States Flood Control Congress he would set in motion preliminary machinery for flood works in the Ohio Valley, New York and New England, and make a personal survey of those areas sometime next month.

The President left Hyde Park by special train several hours after dinner for Rockland, where tomorrow he will board the chartered schooner Sewanna some 10 miles off shore for a two-weeks' sailing cruise in Maine and Canadian waters with three of his sons—James, Franklin, jr., and John.

The flood control conference was his only official business during the day.

Representatives of the federation from Connecticut, Massachusetts, New York, Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Ohio laid before him a three-point program looking to an immediate start of preliminary work on emergency projects in those States without waiting for Congress to appropriate funds next year to carry out the $320,000,000 omnibus flood control authorization program.

Reported Sympathetic.

They reported afterward the Chief Executive received their petition sympathetically, including the third point—to visit the areas hit hardest by early 1936 floods. They said the President would make his tour next month, probably visiting the Connecticut River Valley areas on his return from Canada and Hyde Park around August 1.

Whether he will be able to visit Pennslyvania, Ohio and West Virginia regions before his contemplated first-hand inspection of the Northwest drought area in mid-August has not been decided, White House officials said.

"Approximate panic conditions will obtain in number of emergency areas," said the federation's petition, "if the fall floods come on in late September and early October and no action has been taken toward flood control."

Here are the three recommendations made to the President:

"1. Will the President at this time direct the chief of (Army) engineers to proceed with borings and the preparation of specifications of emergency flood control projects contained within the 1936 flood control law, where States are ready to enter into compacts with the Federal Government, and on which preliminary and divisional reports have been completed, employing available departmental funds for such preparatory purposes?"

Conference Asked.

"2. Will the President direct the chief of engineers and the chairman of the National Resources Board (Secretary Ickes) to prepare before August 1, in conference with a special committee to be designated by the federation, a list of approved emergency flood control works authorized by the 1936 flood control law, and conforming with these requirements:

"That hazard to life and property exists.

"That industry and gainful employment actually be threatened, as shown by recent flood history and present inimical cumulative factors.

"That economic justification be fully established in the opinion of the chief of engineers.

"That the projects be those in which State governments and/or localities have provided or will at once provide legislation necessary for co-operation with the Federal Government as prescribed in the 1936 flood control law.

"3. Will the President at his earliest convenience make a personal inspection of the emergency flood areas?"

Alexandria Clerk Commits Suicide

George R. Fletcher, 31-year-old clerk in the Southern Railway's freight office at Alexandria, committed suicide yesterday in his Alexandria home. A bullet through the left temple caused instantaneous death.

Mrs. Leola Fletcher, mother of the victim, discovered the body after hearing a shot. Neither she, the widow, Mrs. Virginia Riley Fletcher, nor Fletcher's office chief, E. F. Ticer, could ascribe a reason for the suicide. The verdict was pronounced by Coroner Llewellyn Powell.

Fletcher went to work as usual yesterday morning. At lunchtime he left the office and apparently went directly to his house, 205 Sixth street.

He had been in the employ of the Southern Railway since 1917, beginning as a messenger.

would seek to manage American currency through the Reserve Board's powers over cash reserves required of member banks and open market purchases of Government bonds.

Asked whether he thought Landon's telegram to the Cleveland convention favoring a return to convertibility into gold, when possible without adverse effects, barred the way to a managed currency, Fisher replied:

"Well, I hope not; he left a loophole, you know."

MacFadden said he called to meet the Governor and "get in touch" with the situation.

The Landon offices made public during the day a letter from William Cabell Bruce, former Democratic Senator from Maryland, in which he said he was "bitterly disappointed" in President Roosevelt and "deeply gratified" with the Landon-Knox ticket.

The Bruce letter, addressed to Landon and dated June 16, said:

"I am 76 years of age and, with the single exception of Mr. Bryan, when he ran for the Presidency in 1896, I have voted for every Democratic candidate for the Presidency during my long life, though in State of Maryland, and Baltimore City, campaigns, where reform issues of vital importance were at stake, I have frequently voted for Republican candidates.

"I have been bitterly disappointed in Mr. Roosevelt as an incumbent of the Presidential office, and I am deeply gratified by the nomination of yourself as the Presidential candidate of the Republican Party and by the nomination by it of your Vice Presidential running mate, and by the admirable platform, on the whole, on which you were both nominated; and especially delighted am I with the addenda which your enlightened and fearless spirit made to that platform in relation to gold as a monetary agency, and the Federal merit system of appointment."

(In a telegram to the Cleveland convention, Landon said a sound currency meant a return to convertibility into gold when conditions permitted; he also urged extension of the merit system of appointment to all but the very highest Federal posts.)

The special session of the legislature which initiated two proposed amendments to the Kansas Constitution to enable the State to comply with provisions of the Federal security program, adjourned today. The proposals will be submitted to voters at the November election.

Edge Accepts Leadership.

Newark, N. J., July 13 (AP).—Walter E. Edge accepted the chairmanship of the Landon-Knox campaign in New Jersey today at what Republican State Chairman Henry W. Jeffers, sr., termed a "harmonious" meeting of the campaign commitee.

The former Ambassador to France and one-time Senator appointed a sub-committee to work with him. He named Gov. Harold G. Hoffman, Arthur T. Vanderbilt, of Newark; Lloyd B. Marsh, Passaic County, clerk; Mrs. Murray H. Coggeshall, of Morristown, president of the State Republican Women's Club, and Donald G. Collester, of Paterson, president of the Young Republicans of New Jersey.

jostling hundreds from the packed Senate.

New Deal Senators, upholding Gov. Earle's estimates, had demanded $55,000,000 for unemployment relief; Republicans had refused to grant more than $35,000,000.

Before the Senate met the unemployed shouted their demands for "$100,000,000 relief" in a mass meeting in front of the Capitol.

Shouting, singing, booing and jeering, they climbed the steps in front of the State House and for more than an hour listened to speeches by their leaders.

No food orders or cash have been sent out for seven days, while Democrats and Republicans in the Senate battled over how much to appropriate for relief for the remainder of July.

Behind the relief tie-up was a major struggle between New Deal Gov. Earle and the Republican Senate majority over Earle's tax program.

U. S. Credit Unit Will Sell Notes For 150 Million

Commodity Corporation to Seek Lower Interest by Refinancing.

By the Associated Press.

Seeking lower interest rates through a big refinancing move, the Commodity Credit Corporation yesterday announced it would sell $150,000,000 of one-half of 1 per cent collateral trust notes.

The notes, which will mature January 15, will be backed by collateral notes which in turn are secured by commodities having an approximate market value of $218,000,000, or about 140 per cent of the total issue.

An interest rate of 2½ per cent now is being paid by the corporation to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, from which it has been borrowing in the past.

The notes were offered to refinance a major portion of the RFC debt, officials explained, and effect the 2 per cent interest saving.

Subscriptions for the notes may be made in denominations of $5,000 or multiples thereof, the Commodity Corporation said, and the notes will be allotted in the order in which applications are received.

The ultimate security behind the notes consists of commodities pledged with the corporation. This security is represented by negotiable warehouse receipts for 3,461,793 bales of cotton; 11,755,732 bushels of corn; 62,977,260 pounds of tobacco; 5,409,367 gallons of turpentine, and 150,877 round barrels of resin.

The $218,000,000 estimated value of these commodities was fixed as of July 1, and Chairman Jesse H. Jones, of the Reconstruction Corporation, said cotton prices had advanced since then.

Under provisions of a trust agreement between the RFC and the Commodity Corporation, any noteholder may declare it immediately payable if the market value of the collateral commodities, as determined by the RFC, falls below 120 per cent of the face value of the notes then outstanding. An amount equal to all cash received by the corporation through collection and collateral recoveries must be deducted from the face value of total outstanding notes, however.

The notes will be dated July 1. If they are purchased on or before July 15 subscribers will have to pay only the principal, but if purchases are made after that date accrued interest from July 15 will be added.

Youths Program Gets $10,000,000

Aubrey Williams, National Youth administrator, yesterday allocated $10,000,000 to start the new $71,250,000 program for American youth.

Out of this fund, which is to carry on the work for the first three months, $15,000 will go to the District, $53,900 to Maryland and $161,800 to Virginia.

Minimum age for employment in the National Youth program had been increased from 16 to 18, in accordance with the WPA ruling, it was announced yesterday.

Summer projects will be continued, with the initial fund for the District, officials said. These include playground supervisors and similar work being participated in by students.

Greater portion of the NYA program is devoted to student aid in high schools and colleges, but this part of the work, it was explained, will not commence until fall academic terms begin.

Labor Council May Act Today On Suspension of 12 Unions

Group Affiliated With the Committee on Industrial Organization May Be Dropped; Green Hopeful in Lewis Feud.

By Felix Bruner.

The executive council of the American Federation of Labor will begin final consideration today of the question of whether 12 international unions affiliated with the Committee for Industrial Organization shall be suspended.

The decision, which may be reached late today or tomorrow, may result in the most serious split in the ranks of organized labor since the formation of the federation more than 50 years ago.

Members of the executive council yesterday resumed their meetings, interrupted over the week-end and continued to wait for representatives of the recalcitrant unions to appear and explain their position. No one appeared.

The charges against the unions, which include the powerful United Mine Workers of America, are that they have set up a "dual" organization, and that they are attempting to bring into industrial unions in the steel, rubber, automobile and other major industries, workers who already belong to A. F. of L. organizations.

The opinion was growing last night that the only decision that could be reached by the council would be suspension of the unions, which means a loss of 1,000,000 members to the federation and probably will result in two large rival labor organizations instead of the united front that has been presented by the federation for half a century.

While insisting that he was "still hoping" for a solution of the problem, William Green, federation president, said that he believed the same treatment would be given all the unions belonging to the C. I. O.

"Their refusal to appear in response to our very cordial invitation has made it very difficult for the council," Green said. Particularly invited to appear yesterday were the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers and the Amalgamated Clothing Workers. The former made no response to the invitation. Sidney Hillman, president of the latter union and a leader in the C. I. O., explained in a letter that he would not appear and that he believed his position was already clear.

The Oil Field Workers and the Hatters, Cap and Millinery Workers have been invited to appear today, but because it is clear that they will not respond, the council expects to go ahead this afternoon with consideration of its final action.

"We have had no communication from the C. I. O." Green said. We had hoped that if they appeared a settlement could have been reached."

Green said that he believed there would be no delay in taking final action and that it would be determined at the present session of the council.

While both Green and members of the council declined to say whether they believed suspension of the recalcitrant unions was inevitable, it appeared that many of the council members believed this to be the case. William Hutcheson, president of the carpenters union, and Daniel Tobin, president of the teamsters, said they believed this was the only way out. It was emphasized, however, that council members still had "open minds" on the subject.

Hutcheson has been a bitter opponent of John L. Lewis, head of the C. I. O., and in the last A. F. of L. convention the two came to blows. Hutcheson is reported to have told the council that if the C. I. O. unions are not suspended the carpenters will withdraw from the federation.

On the other hand, George M. Harrison, president of the railway clerks, expressed hope that action could be delayed.

A minor brush with the mine workers was developing yesterday in another direction, when the council considered giving a charter to gas and by-product workers. The miners' union has indicated that it considers these workers under its jurisdiction. They include 25 unions with a membership of between 3,000 and 4,000.

Meanwhile, John Brophy, director of the C. I. O., returned to Washington from Pittsburgh and reported rapid progress in organization of steel workers, who are joining the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers. Brophy expressed himself as pleased with the settlement of the Wheeling Steel Co. strike at Portsmouth, Ohio, which resulted in union recognition and return to work of 5,000 employes.

Woman Beaten In Cotton Belt Will Go Back

Social Worker Fighting For Sharecroppers Not Afraid, She Says.

Twenty-eight-year-old Willie Sue Blagden, the Memphis social worker who was flogged a month ago when she went into Arkansas on a mission for the Tenant Farmers Union, flashed deep dimples yesterday as she announced she was going back to the scene of her brutal treatment.

In Washington to try to learn the contents of a report submitted recently to the AAA on conditions among sharecroppers, Miss Blagden said she "isn't the least bit afraid to go back" to Earle, Ark., where she was beaten by six men the night of June 15.

"Whenever I am needed to go there on behalf of the tenant farmers I shall certainly go," she said.

Within a short time she expects to file a damage suit against her assailants, men she described as "plantation owners and their friends." Their identities are known, she declared, and the case already is in the hands of counsel headed by former Judge A. B. Pittman, of Memphis.

"I'll do whatever I can to help the farmers and their families," she said. "Those people live in slavery and it is time someone should help them to help themselves. No one who has not actually seen the conditions in the cotton belt can realize how horrible they are."

Miss Blagden pointed out that floggings of union members had been going on for months, but that the attack upon her was the first to draw national attention. Before she was dragged out of an automobile in Earle and beaten, all the victims had been men or colored women.

"The fact that I was a white Southern woman naturally attracted attention," she added.

She had gone to Earle, she explained, with the Rev. Claude Williams, Presbyterian clergyman, from Little Rock, to see if they could learn the fate of Frank Weems, a colored leader in the Tenant Farmers Union, who had been flogged the night of June 8, when a meeting of the union was broken up.

"We had thought he was killed," said Miss Blagden, "and a funeral had been arranged. So many Negroes disappear under mysterious circumstances in the South that a funeral without a corpse is not unusual. But when we heard that the sheriff had said Weems was alive we decided to investigate. After all it isn't customary to hold a funeral for a live person, even in Arkansas."

But no sooner had she and the Little Rock clergyman reached Earle than they were kidnaped and beaten, according to the social worker. She, herself, is convinced Weems is dead.

The greatest hope of the union now, she said, is to get public opinion so aroused that help will be forthcoming from the outside.

"We want a national public investigation by competent investigators," she declared. "The union is asking only for a decent living standard for the 8,000,000 sharecroppers in the cotton belt."

Miner Is Killed In Birmingham Ore Mill Strike

Nonunion Worker Felled by Snipers; Sheriff Seizes Suspect.

By the Associated Press.

Birmingham, Ala., July 13.—Hidden snipers killed a nonunion miner today as a climax to a brief period of terror in Alabama's strike-torn iron ore mills.

It was the first death by violence since the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers called a walkout six weeks ago at the Red Ore mines of the Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Co.

The victim, Paul Hines, was felled while at work on the 2-acre garden plot to which he turned for livelihood after the strike resulted in closing of the mines.

Bloodhounds were hurried to the death scene by Sheriff Fred H. McDuff and his deputies. A man was arrested after the dogs followed a trail to a spot near his home.

Trouble began in the strike zone late last night, when bullets rained down from the mountain overlooking the heavy workings and scattered around the mine buildings. Company deputies returned the fire, one using a machine gun. Authorities estimated 400 shots were exchanged.

Mary Astor Sues To Regain Child

Los Angeles, July 13 (AP).—Mary Astor, film actress, charged in an affidavit filed today that her former husband, Dr. Franklyn Thorpe, a physician, coerced her into permitting a divorce by threatening to "scandalize" her publicly.

The affidavit accompanied a petition asking that an order giving Dr. Thorpe custody of the couple's 4-year-old daughter be set aside. Miss Astor asked full custody.

Superior Judge Dudley Valentine issued a temporary order granting Miss Astor care and control of her daughter pending a hearing July 28.

The affidavit said Dr. Thorpe "repeatedly stated that unless she (Miss Astor) permitted him to have the divorce and an order of sole custody, he would publicly scandalize her and ruin her career as an actress."

5 Skeletons Found On Manassas Field

Manassas, Va., July 13 (AP).—Two buttons, one stamped with the United States Army engineering insignia and the other bearing the inscription, "Mass. Volunteer Militia," identified today the remains of five men uncovered on the Manassas battlefield as probable participants in the original conflict which will be re-enacted here July 21.

Workmen uncovered the skeletons about 300 yards east of the old Chinn house as they prepared for the first battle of Manassas seventy-fifth anniversary celebration.

One of the buttons bore the name of Scoville & Co., Waterbury, Conn. It was the one stamped with the Army insignia.

As the Chinn house figured in both the first and second battles of Manassas, the bodies might be the remains of Federals killed in either battle.

Son Discovers Mother's Body Hanging in Tree

Towson, Md., July 13 (AP).—A son found the body of Mrs. Minnie Leatherbury, a dormitory matron at the Plymouth, N. H., State Normal School, hanging from a tree in the yard of her home here today.

Edward E. Leatherbury told police he discovered his mother suspended by a sheet from a limb of the tree. Members of the family said she had been despondent.

thought at once of her latest poetic endeavor.

"I said to mother I thought it best to pay the money in full so I sent the $50 and my poem," she testified.

Cohen wrote music for the verse, she added, and she took it to the 5-and-10, where the girl played it for her.

"It was lovely," she said.

"Did they rewrite the words of your song, too?" asked Cohen's lawyer, Horace Donnelly, jr.

"Yes," she said, "and their thoughts were more beautiful even than my own."

Cohen played Miss Becker's song on the piano, sending the music tinkling down the marble halls of the department.

"Did you ever see a desert?" demanded O'Brien.

Miss Becker said she never had, except in the movies. O'Brien started to read from her song:

"Out in the great open spaces, where the palms wave to and fro—holding you close to my chest——"

"Did you," he asked "envision a man holding a lady close to his chest, whispering these sweet remarks into her ear?"

"Yes," whispered Miss Becker.

She added that she had written a total of 125 poems and that she was so satisfied with the service she had received from Cohen she was going to send him another of her efforts, even if she had to borrow the necessary $50.

Cohen, the curly-haired composer of "Canadian Capers" and other popular hits, was the next witness. He read some of the mail received from prospective clients. One of his letters came from a lady who said she had written a beautiful song about California.

"Some folks think I'm crazy," she wrote. "I receive the inspiration for all my songs from heaven."

The hearing continues, like this, with music and good, clean fun, today. There's food and drink on sale in the basement cafeteria and the Postoffice Department has no cover or minimum charge. There is no greater entertainment bargain.

Judge Garrett Will Seek Seat Of Rep. Blanton

Prominent Jurist Expected to Win Vote of Farm, Labor Groups.

Representative Thomas L. Blanton, who has become almost a fixture on Capitol Hill through his 20 years service in the House of Representatives, is facing one of the hardest and most bitter fights in his long political career. His fate will, in all probability, be sealed on Saturday, July 25, in the Texas Democratic primaries since the nomination is tantamount to election.

Although several candidates are waging extensive campaigns to represent Texas' Seventeenth District in Congress, Blanton's most formidable opponent is generally conceded to be Judge Clyde L. Garrett, 50, now rounding out a fourth term as judge of Eastland County.

Since the Seventeenth District was formed in 1918, Blanton has never failed to be elected to the House, usually by substantial majorities. In 1928 he attempted to win a seat in the Senate, but was unsuccessful. With the exception of the period between March, 1929, and May, 1930, he has served continuously in Congress since he was first sent to Washington by the old Sixteenth District in 1916.

Backing by Labor.

Garrett, who constitutes his biggest threat in the coming primary, is expected to poll a heavy rural vote and to be supported by labor.

The candidate from Eastland has announced that he favors:

An adequate and liberal Federal old-age pension.

A balanced budget attained by elimination of useless expenditures instead of increasing taxes.

Adequate hospitalization and reasonable compensation for disabled veterans of all wars.

A tariff on foreign oil and foreign farm and ranch products.

More jobs and less dole.

The protection of every person in his individual liberty; the curtailment of Federal encroachment upon State rights and the preservation of local self-government.

Postmaster Merit System.

The placing of all postmasters under the merit system.

The restoration of agriculture to a prosperous condition not only by soil conservation programs, but by the use of every practical and constitutional means.

Garrett believes the Federal anti-trust laws should be strengthened, and that the small producer and distributer should receive better protection of labor, and that the "loopholes in our income tax laws should be closed to prevent the tax dodger from escaping his just share of taxation."

Blanton's chief opponent also stands for repeal of all Federal emergency legislation "as business improves and as industry is able to absorb unemployment." He believes the Nation should maintain an army, navy, and air service adequate for national defense and opposes America entering any war except to protect America.

Opposes Foreign Alliances.

Garrett opposes all foreign alliances and foreign entanglements, the issuance of any more tax-exempt securities, a Federal sales tax of any kind, Federal control of the oil industry, and the use of the franking privilege of the United States mails.

Garrett, born in a one-room log house, which is still standing, is the son of a Confederate Army veteran, who was one of the first county commissioners in Eastland County. He worked in his father's cotton patch and corn field while attending public school at Gorman, Tex.

To earn money to attend Hankins College he labored for several months as a section hand on the old Texas Central Railroad. After he left Hankins he taught school.

Elected County Clerk.

Garrett held his first public office in 1912 at the age of 27, when he was elected clerk of Eastland County. He served three two-year terms, receiving more than 90 per cent of the vote cast at the beginning of his third term.

He gave up the clerkship to go into banking and later became city manager of Eastland at the request of the residents.

In 1928 he was elected judge of Eastland County, which, at that time had one of the heaviest per capita indebtedness of any county in the State. With the help of a commissioners' court, chosen by the citizens, Garrett began the task of straightening things out and later was able to say that the county is now in the best financial condition it has been in for years.

His backers point out that during the time of reorganization and refinancing which following the troublous aftermath of the Ranger and Desdemona oil boom, no man lost his home through a suit for taxes nor were any of the county's debts scaled down.

Two years ago Garrett was made president of the West Texas County Judges Association, composed of 157 counties. Last year he became president of the Texas County Judges and Commissioners Association.

In 1912, the same year he first sought public office, Garrett married Miss Sallie Day, also of Texas. They have five children, Carl, 22; Clyde, jr., 18; Catherine, 16, Virginia, 13, and Sara, 4.

Although, according to his supporters, he has never found time for a vacation, Garrett is known to them as a church leader who teaches a Bible class and acts as postmaster at Baptist functions throughout his section of the State. Judge Garrett is a member of the Masonic order and is a Shriner. He also belongs to the Knights of Pythias and to the Lions.

Mutilation

received a threatening letter from her "lawyer."

The girl turned loose her most sensational story following the murder of Joseph H. Beal, Lake Wales mayor, shot to death at his home the night of June 25, 1932. She wrote from Washington that she could tell the whole story of the crime, and Lake Wales citizens paid her expenses to that city. State Attorney J. C. Rogers and other officials found that she could be of no help to them and indicated they believed she obtained her information on the case from reading the newspapers. The case still is unsolved. She was detained for a time in order that an investigation might be made, and then released.

Still later she broke into print when she came up with a story that she saw a man's body concealed in a swamp near Tiger Lake and accompanied officers in a search. The "mystery" man never was found.

Judge C. M. Wiggins, in Lakeland, made this notation on his records after the girl's last appearance: "Margaret has the habit of making up big tsories, usually involving herself, which are designed to produce sympathy or notoriety." He described her as a small brunette who "makes a pathetic show."

Three Men Hunted.

Earlier in the day, with three men sought—one here and two in New York—and another already under arrest, Inspector Thompson said he was pressing his inquiry "from all angles." Although declining to reveal identities of those sought, he indicated New York officials had been instructed to pick up two reputed cohorts of Luciano, now serving a 30-to-50-year sentence in Sing Sing.

It was evident last night, however, that authorities were not satisfied with the Bell woman's story—describing how she was attacked by a "killer" in her apartment at 1230 New Hampshire avenue northwest, early Sunday, and branded with Luciano's initials on her abdomen, leg and back.

Hogan Conducts Inquiry.

Earlier grilling was conducted by Frank S. Hogan, deputy assistant district attorney of New York County and chief aid to Thomas E. Dewey, New York's special racket prosecutor. Hogan was assisted by local authorities and Paul E. Lockwood, also of Dewey's staff.

Although mutilation marks on the Bell woman's body were still visible last night, she wore no bandages and apparently was not suffering pain. Inspector Thompson said it would have been possible for the wounds to have been inflicted with a pin point.

The initials "C. L."—carved one above the other on her leg—and the figures "3-12," scratched on her abdomen, bled only slightly, authorities revealed. There were several scratches on the woman's back, but they were only superficial wounds.

Insists Story Is True.

But the Bell woman insists her story of a hired "killer," sent by members of Luciano's gang to "rub her out" because she testified before a recent New York grand jury investigating vice activities, was "absolutely true."

While she faced relentless questioning last night, United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett ordered the telephone company to surrender all records of outgoing and incoming calls to her apartment. She told investigators her whereabouts in Washington were traced by gangsters through a long-distance telephone call she made to New York last Saturday.

The two men sought in New York are believed to be the alleged attacker—named by the Bell woman—and an underworld physician, reputedly employed by the Luciano mob. A third suspect—the mysterious "Leo," accused by the woman as "finger man" of the bizarre attack—is being sought here, although police fear he may have fled town when the story "broke."

Fantastic Story Bared.

One of the leads worked on by police was a fantastic tale leading up to the reputed mutilation. Briefly it is:

The Bell woman was paid by Luciano's defense attorneys to "get in" with a special prosecutor in New York in order to develop a basis for the vice chief's appeal from conviction. But instead, the prosecutor immediately suspected her and turned the tables. She was persuaded to give authorities a detailed account of Luciano's operations.

And then, believing she was still under the "protection" of gangland attorneys, she fled to Washington. From here she was to communicate with a Luciano henchman in New York and learn the location of a hideout in North Carolina. That was three weeks ago. She remained here, took an apartment, and vainly attempted to contact an underworld physician.

At 11 a. m. Saturday, according to the story, she again called long-distance to the physican's home and was told he was out. This time she left her telephone number in Washington.

It was through this number, the story goes, that she was traced.

Meanwhile, the mysterious "Leo" was sent to Washington to locate the woman. It was while visiting the Hangar Club in nearby Virginia that he saw her. At the same time she saw him and, recognizing him as a Luciano mobster, fled in panic to her apartment. Leo followed.

But the telephone call, it was reported, had done its work and a hired killer was dispatched to "get her." When the alleged killer arrived in Washington, he contacted Leo and was told where to find her.

Police admit the Bell woman was expecting her brother—one of two living here at a K street address—to come to the apartment. So when someone knocked on the door early Sunday, she immediately opened it. But instead of her brother, the accused killer reached his fist through the open door and struck her.

Investigators refused to divulge how much of the story they believed, steadfastly insisting they were investigating "all angles." The Bell woman was—according to her version of the affair—slugged into unconsciousness, bound and gagged. Police, however, found no gags in the apartment. She said her attacker ripped out a telephone and bound her with the wires. He "overlooked" an extension phone in the next room and it was with this that she finally summoned aid.

It was learned from telephone company officials, however, that the "emergency" call came over the wire in a woman's calm voice. She said:

"Send the police to 1230 New Hampshire avenue northwest, apartment 304, right away."

Police were puzzled as to how the woman could have been calm and exact while apparently semi-conscious.

It was the Bell woman herself, police said, who first pointed out that the initials, "C. L." stood for Luciano and the figures "3-12" represented the positions of his initials in the alphabet.

The man held last night on a technical charge of investigation was Milton R. Reeves, 28, of the 600 block I street northwest, employe of a Virginia night club. Police said they were merely "checking" his story. Police also were talking to an employe of a Ninth street drinking place.

Late yesterday the woman's brother, Ray Bell, went to police headquarters and was closeted for several hours with Inspector Thompson and New York authorities. He gave police a statement, but it was learned he apparently knew nothing of his sister's activities. He recently came here from his family home in Georgia. Another brother, Roy, also was questioned.

In New York, meanwhile, Moses Polakoff, one of the Luciano defense attorneys, said he had never heard of the Bell woman.

"I know nothing about this alleged assault," he was quoted as saying by the Associated Press. "I never heard of her. Luciano never heard of her. It looks like a hoax. My guess is she is seeking publicity and wants to sell a story."

It was reported that the Bell woman was offered a sum of money to tell her story to a New York newspaper, describing Luciano as "a good guy" and intimating he was framed, but changed her mind.

During the sensational vice ring investigation in New York, the Bell woman testified before a grand jury but was not called to the witness stand when Luciano was tried.

Snake Trial Nears End.

Los Angeles, July 13 (AP).—The State closed its lengthy case today against Robert S. James, on trial on murder charges based on the snake bite-drowning of his seventh wife, Mary.

The trial opened June 22, the prosecution requiring three weeks to present its case.

Step to Collect Grayson's Bond Taken in Court

Red Cross Head Asked to Answer Writ in Bank Case of Brother.

Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue, in District Court, late yesterday issued a writ calling upon Admiral Cary T. Grayson, head of the American Red Cross, to show cause why he should not be called upon to relinquish property valued at $2,000 because of the failure of his brother, John C. Grayson, to appear here for trial on indictments charging him with various infractions of the banking laws.

Admiral Grayson appeared as personal bondsman for his brother after the District grand jury had returned two indictments against his brother. One indictment charged John Grayson with conspiracy to embezzle and conspiracy to steal the funds of the defunct Park Savings Bank, and the other indictment alleged he was guilty of conspiracy to defraud the Government.

Trial of John Grayson has been postponed numerous times because of his illness. He is now confined to his Charlottesville, Va., home because of a critical heart ailment that is sufficiently serious to cause his death if brought to trial, physicians said.

The rule signed yesterday requires Admiral Grayson to appear 20 days after he is served with a copy and show cause why his property should not be confiscated to appease the Government claim on the bond. It was said yesterday that Admiral Grayson was ill at his Virginia home.

The charge against Grayson is that, as chief clerk in the office of the national bank examiner of the Treasury he tipped off Robert Stunz, executive officer of the defunct Park Savings Bank, as to the movements of bank examiners, thus enabling the latter, who committed suicide, to cover up a huge shortage.

Brazil Guards Borders to Stop Bela Kun Entry

Former Bolshevist Dictator of Hungary Reported on Soviet Errand.

By the Associated Press.

Rio de Janeiro, July 13.—Along the longest national coastline in America and on nine international borders, Brazilian authorities watched tonight to prevent the entry of Bela Kun, the Communist dictator of Hungary during the period following the World War.

Capt. Filinto Mueller, chief of police in the Rio de Janeiro federal district, had before him what was authoritatively described as "a long report from diplomatic sources" to the effect the Hungarian Bolshevist had been sent to Brazil by the Comintern.

Capt. Mueller, in a radio speech, said he knew also of the coming of Otto Braun. He identified the latter as "a dangerous agitator."

Serphim Braga, chief of the social security section of the Rio police, said he was uncertain whether Kun would try to disembark at Rio de Janeiro or at another of the dozen ports of Brazil. Some observers thought he would try to land at a nearby country and make his way secretly into Brazil.

The officials asserted he had left Europe more than a week ago.

Bela Kun was elected president of Hungary when that country came under Bolshevist control after the World War.

Shipbuilding Behind Schedule; NRA Rules Are Blamed in Part

Shortage of Specialists and Yard Trouble Also Declared Cause of Delay in Work on 49 of 79 Vessels Now Being Constructed.

By the Associated Press.

The Navy Department disclosed last night that despite efforts to speed up its building program, work on 49 of the 79 warships now under construction was behind schedule.

On January 1 the Bureaus of Construction and Engineering reported delays in both private and navy yards had resulted in holding up from six to eight months the completion dates for 50 of the 84 vessels then under construction.

Although several vessels have been completed in the last six months, the July 1 report, made public last night, indicated that the shipyards have been unable to overcome the time handicap imposed, officials said, by old NRA requirements, shipyard troubles, shortage of experienced construction specialists, and other difficulties.

Of the 79 ships now under construction, 28 have been launched. Hull construction is more than 75 per cent complete on 28, more than 50 per cent complete on 8, and more than 25 per cent complete on 21.

During June, gains of 5 per cent or more were recorded in hull construction on the submarines Plunger, Pompano and Skipjack, and the destroyers Porter, Selfridge, McDougal, Winslow, Dunlap and Mugford.

Engine and machinery installation is more than 75 per cent complete on 28 ships, more than 50 per cent complete on 17, and more than 25 per cent complete on 8.

A 10.1 per cent gain in machinery installation was recorded on the destroyer Craven during the last month, and 5 per cent gains were checked for the destroyers Sampson and Gridley.

Although the contracts call for completion of 30 vessels this year, only 25 are now scheduled to be completed before the end of December. Included among those to be finished are five which, under the contracts, should have been been completed in late 1935.

The airplane carrier Yorktown, originally slated to be finished in October, will not be ready for delivery until March, 1937. The aircraft carrier Enterprise, although more than 75 per cent finished, is 5 points behind schedule.

The keel for the third carrier under construction—the Wasp—was laid in April. Progress has been slow since that time, officials said.

The Vincennes, one of two heavy cruisers being built, is now 85 per cent complete and is expected to be finished January 1. Construction on the Wichita, the second heavy cruiser, is four months behind schedule.

Alabama Mob Hunts Attacker

Norman Summers, a deputy. The possemen, warned by the wounding of Hicks earlier today, had been proceeding with the utmost caution, certain the man would fire when cornered.

The entire countryside was aroused. Along the dusty country backroads, entire families were out on their front proches, the menfolks armed and watchful. Boys in their teens armed themselves with airguns or other makeshift weapons and stood ready to participate in the manhunt.

Coleman, however, issued orders instructing the aroused country folk to return to their homes. Jacksonville, from where he summoned the machine gun company, is only 6 miles from the scene of the manhunt. The troops arrived here shortly after Coleman issued orders for mobilization.

First appeal for troops had been telephoned to Gov. Bibb Graves at Montgomery by Judge R. B. Carr, who told the Governor he feared violence would follow capture of the man. Gov. Graves immediately dispatched Coleman from the capital with power to summon the militia at his discretion.

Authorities said Mrs. Hill, wife of Joel Hill, a farmer, was accosted by the colored man as she worked in the garden of her isolated farm home. The man, they said, covered her head with a coat and dragged her into nearby woodlands, with the warning:

"Don't scream, or I'll kill you. If you don't scream, I won't hurt you."

Mrs. D. E. Randall, a neighbor, witnessed the scene. As Mrs. Hill, mother of three children, was dragged into the woods, she ran into the Hill home only to learn Joel Hill, the husband, had been in Gadsden for two days.

She ran half a mile down the highway to a filling station where she gave the alarm over a telephone. Ten minutes later the roads were swarming with armed men.

About 20 minutes later, Hicks spied the man sliding down an embankment on the highway. He shot Hicks down and escaped under the wounded farmer's return fire. A trap was set for him at nearby Alexandria, but he burst through the lines and escaped into woodlands virtually impenetrable.

As the word passed over the back country grapevine, Alabamans armed themselves with shotguns and rifles and hurried out to join in the hunt.

Mississippian Hunted.

Toccopola, Miss., July 13 (U.P.).—A posse of several score grim, close-mouthed armed men scoured the bottom lands near here tonight for a 25-year-old colored sawmill worker who entered the home of a white woman and made an attempt to assault her.

The man was believed surrounded twice, but escaped both times. Sheriff O. D. Patterson, of Pontotoc County, and a group of deputies led the posse. Bloodhounds were brought from New Albany to aid the search.

The attempted assault occurred last night when the man allegedly entered the woman's home while her husband was away. She awoke to find him sitting on her bed.

Screaming, she managed to escape and ran to a neighbor's home. A posse of about 50 men organized and tracked the man to the colored section, where he escaped after a number of shots were fired.

Later in the night he was believed surrounded in the bottom lands, but again got away.

Sheriff Patterson tonight said he believed it was only a matter of time before the man would be captured. He said he would be able to prevent any mob violence.

Girl, 13, Attacked.

Plymouth, Mass., July 13 (U.P.).—An aroused posse of 200 citizens and police of this historic town scoured nearby meadows late tonight after it was reported a short, dark man attacked 13-year-old Roberta Ketchum while she was taking a nightly stroll along an unlighted street.

Between hysterical sobs, the girl said the man seized her, threw her over a fence and attempted to assault her before she broke free and fled screaming, according to police. Her attacker had threatened to kill her if she made an outcry, police said she told them.

Miss Ketchum, daughter of a local market proprietor, was reported suffering from a wrenched back and neck caused when the attacker attempted to gag her with her own bandana.

Britain to Shun Locarno Talks If Reich Does

England Reported Wishing to Avoid Being Forced Into French Bloc.

By The Associated Press.

Paris, July 13.—Informed persons said tonight Great Britain has made it plain that she, like Italy, would refuse to attend the Locarno meeting tentatively set for Thursday at Brussels unless Germany also participates.

Britain, it was said in these quarters, has indicated she feels the meeting should be postponed unless Italy and Germany attend.

These sources declared they believed Britain feared a three-power conference would give France an opportunity to demand application of the agreement made by the four Locarno adherents—Britain, France, Belgium and Italy—after Reichsfuehrer Adolph Hitler denounced the pact and remilitarized the Rhineland last March.

Military Alliance.

At that time the four nations agreed to join in a virtual military alliance if the German leader refused to consider proposals to re-establish European security.

Britain, informed sources declared, wishes to avoid being forced into a French bloc, opposed to an Austro-Italo-German combination which, it is felt in some quarters, has grown out of the Austro-German friendship pact announced yesterday.

Spurred Suggestion.

Stands taken by France and Italy in expectation of the Brussels parley brought forth the British suggestion that Britain, France and Belgium should issue a common statement before the meeting setting forth their aims and desires at the conference, and then allow Reichsfuehrer Hitler's delegates to attend the opening session.

The French took the view Germany first should be excluded from the conference until that nation produced a basis for discussion. Italy demanded that Germany be admitted from the beginning.

Ambassador Vittorio Cerruti meanwhile visited the foreign office to "explain" Italy's part in the Austro-German accord.

Showers

with the temperature reaching a comparatively mild maximum of 80 at 4 p. m., the eleventh day of the record-topping heat was but a repetition of its predecessors in other sections of the country.

No new deaths augmented the list for Washington and vicinity, which now numbers 10 from drownings and prostrations, but the intense humidity of .82 at 8 a. m. yesterday, which later dropped to .60, then rose to .70, caused many to become ill enough for treatment either at hospitals or in their homes.

Throughout the United States and Canada, the toll due to prostrations far outnumbers those from drowning, the Associated Press reported last night.

As American Medical Association authorities urged extreme care against "overdoing," from Canada's inferno of cloudless sky and baking sun came reports of mountain casualties.

The Associated Press, in a dispatch from Toronto, estimated the toll at 450, and added that extra grave diggers had been called out during the night to bury Canada's dead.

Meantime, torrential rains were reported over Winnipeg, in the heart of the Dominion's great natural granaries, breaking, temporarily at least, the hot spell which had claimed 30 lives in Manitoba alone. Emerson, in this province, however, had reported a new mark for the Canadian prairies, with a reading of 112.

Cooler weather came to Saskatchewan and Alberta, and across the continent, at Port Arthur, Ont., 1,500 persons were reported ready to evacuate if forest fires approached any nearer.

Toronto undertakers said the number of funerals was greater than at any time since the influenza epidemic of 1918, and ambulance drivers and hospital staffs continued to work overtime.

The heat yesterday began to bring grave concern to industrial sectors.

General Motors took the lead in the manufacturing centers in authorizing employes to vote to close the plants. Managers have been authorized to confer with employes to ascertain whether they wish to go on working in high temperatures.

As a temporary breeze swept Washington yesterday, and the mercury fell, "hot spots" of more than 100 degrees were numerous elsewhere.

From Chicago came the report that milk prices had advanced in several cities as parched pastures reduced supplies.

Leading Washington dairies, however, stated last night that there was no danger of a milk shortage here, and that they contemplated no rise in prices.

Saginaw, Mich., a lake city with large lumber mills, reported a reading of 109 degrees at 3:40 p. m., a new all-time temperature high for the State.

Chicago's gift from Lake Michigan, according to the Associated Press, was a cooling breeze, which held the mercury to 85, and New York enjoyed the moderate 70's, but expected warmer weather today.

Emerson, Manitoba, set a new mark for the Canadian prairies, with a reading of 112.

Rains ended the menace of forest fires near Gillette, Wyo. Rain fell on northern Minnesota during the afternoon, but there the forest fires, sweeping through dry pines and other timber, continued a potential menace.

State WPA head, Thomas H. Moodie, at Bismarck, N. Dak., yesterday reported 23 dams were under construction in a program to provide the State with a steady water supply.

Hot spots throughout the country yesterday included Grand Rapids, Mich., with 107; Henderson, Ky., with 113; Harrisburg and Carbondale, Ill., with 112 each; Muskegon, Mich., with 101.

Ordinarily cool Duluth, Minn., had 106, as did Madison, Wis. Central Illinois was seared again.

In some places in the West children waded and bathed in the mudholes left by passing showers.

Arab Uprising Over Palestine Feared by Transjordan Emir

Ex-Aid of Lawrence Cites Dangers of Holy Land Powder Box.

By the Associated Press.

Amman, Transjordan, July 13.—The Emir of Abdullah, who once swept across desert sands with Lawrence of Arabia, sat cross-legged in his tent amid his Bedouins and said simply:

"I don't now how much longer I can hold them."

Nightly thousands of fighting veterans—the Transjordan Bedouins—edge nearer the Jordan River beyond which their blood-brothers are fighting Jewish immigration and British control.

"I have held them for two months," the leader continued. But I fear grave trouble if the Palestine problem is not settled quickly."

Outside the Emir's black goat-hair tent the stars hung low in the desert's dusk. Tethered outside the open flag was a coal-black Arabian stallion, ready for the Emir's next trek into the desert wastes to quiet some Arab tribe, to pacify restless shieks.

"How would you feel about a man who has had his house taken away from him?" he asked abruptly.

The Emir looked tired, sitting there on a desert carpet in his summer home 10 miles from the capital city, Amman.

This aid of Lawrence, brother of King Feisal, son of King Hussein—ringing names in Near East history—sat with his dreams of a great Arab union of Syria, Arabia, Lebanon, Palestine and Transjordan. But he faced the reality of the Palestine powder box.

"No, we cannot interfere," he said. "But a man does not hate himself, and all Arabs will hold on with their teeth for their rights. Hold on until the British government realizes the justice of Arabian claims for independence, economic security, freedom from the rising tide of Jews who have smothered the Palestine Arab by absorbing his land."

The leader had spoken guardedly at first, but now, bristling:

"If there had been no Balfour declaration (promising a national home for Jews in Palestine), Jews would have come under Arabian government in Palestine. They would have been welcome. Now, to find any solution, Jewish immigration in Palestine must be limited to 30 per cent of the present Jewish population if any room is to be left at all for the Arabs."

Abdullah's son, the Crown Prince Emir Talal, is himself a fiery advocate of assistance to Palestine Arabs.

The father must keep his son in line. He must keep everybody in line in a situation where at least 50,000 fighting Bedouins could sweep across the Jordan to where 10,000 Britons keep the Palestine house in order amid sporadic sniping and death.

The British pay the Emir 14,000 pounds (about $70,000) a year to keep the trust. He said earnestly:

"The Palestine problem is not ours—yet. But if trouble continues there we will have troubles here. I have restrained my people for two months. I cannot hold them much longer."

Italo-German 'Wall' Through Europe Likely

New Accord With Austria Seen Thrust at Soviet Influence.

By the Associated Press.

Vienna, July 13.—Diplomatic sources tonight said the new Austro-German accord might be the foundation stone of an Italo-German "wall" through the center of Europe.

This wall, they suggested, would be intended to keep Soviet Russian influence out of the Danubian Valley and, at the same time, might break up the solidarity of the Little Entente.

Within Austria, however, tradesmen reflected the influence of the controlled press, jubilantly predicting better business with the reappearance of German tourists.

Held Big Peace Move.

Newspapers and German quarters called the accord an important move for peace, removing the world's uncertainty over Nazi Germany's intentions toward Austria.

Monarchists remained downcast, declaring no restoration of the Hapsburg dynasty could be expected within two years.

Unannounced points of the treaty, a high German source disclosed, include Austrian treatment of the swastika on the same basis as is accorded the flags of other countries, as well as the lifting of a 1,000-mark visa fee for tourists from the Reich.

Nazis to Have Voice.

Informed observers also said Austrian cabinet appointment of Edmund Glaise-Horstenau, avowed Pan-German, would permit Nazis the voice in Austrian affairs to which their numbers entitled them. Glaise-Horstenau was named minister without portfolio.

Germany, in the agreement recognized complete Austrian sovereignty and pledged herself not to interfere in internal Austrian affairs. Austria, on the other hand, acknowledged herself a German nation.

Paris Parades Today to Mark Bastille Day

Guards and Police Ordered to Keep Political Foes Apart at Show.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, July 13.—Mobile guards and police received orders tonight to keep the government's supporters and enemies apart when they turn out tomorrow for the army's annual show in celebration of Bastille Day.

Leaders of both Leftists and Rightists called on their followers to cheer the troops who will march past President Lebrun and Premier Blum at a morning review.

The army will display the men and guns which France considers her safest protection against war.

Two big parades by members of the People's Front will start separately and converge as a cross on the Place de la Bastille. This double parade will be the only officially recognized civilian demonstration.

Col. Francois de la Rocque said his disbanded Nationalists Croix de Feu, which showed its strength last year in a big manifestation, would refrain from attempting a demonstration.

Its members now are organized as the "French Social" Party. De la Rocque urged the members to go to the Champs Elysee for the military review.

The Socialist Party ordered its members to meet in the same place as a sign of "triumph" over "the Fascists who pretended to forbid this neighborhood to them forever."

Socialists, Communist and Radical-Socialist supporters of Premier Leon Blum's government, forming the People's Front, will take over the day for their own.

It will be a victory celebration for the People's Front which a year ago turned out for a similar demonstration against the government of the then Premier Pierre Laval.

4 Reported Killed In Syrian Rioting

Beirut, July 13. (AP).—A riot in the ancient seaport of Sidon (Saida) was reported today to have claimed four lives. Several persons were wounded and others arrested, authorities said.

The disorders started Sunday during a protest by Syrian Nationalists against the action of four Moslem deputies in the Lebanese Chamber in favor of Lebanese independence.

South Chinese Plea to Battle Japan Ignored

Nationalist Party's Group Ousts Chan, Forms Defense Council.

By the Associated Press.

Nanking, China, July 13.—China's powerful kuomintang rebuked the restless southwest today. The central committee of the Nationalist Party ignored southern demands for war against Japan.

It abolished its southwest executive committee, discharged Gen. Chan Chai-Tong, the Kwangtung commander, and condemned southern leaders for trying to establish independent politico-economic units.

Then it established a national defense council, which will include leaders of all sections and heard an eloquent appeal for political and military unity of all Chinese factions from the Nanking dictator, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek.

Gen. Chiang said resistance to foreign aggression was impossible without such material and spiritual unity.

(Dispatches from Peiping said Japan obtained a new hold on North China Monday with the appointment of Wang Keh-Min as chairman of the Hopeh-Charar economic commission. Wang, sponsored by the Japanese, succeeded Hsiao Cheng-Ying.

[The dispatches quoted vernacular newspapers as saying the inner Mongolian Prince Teh Wang had flown to Changchun to confer with Emperor Kang Teh (the former Henry Pu Yi) of Manchukuo and with Japanese officials.]

40,000 Troops Of Italy Leave Egypt Frontier

Evacuation Is Answer to Recall of Fleets From Mediterranean.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, July 13.—Italian troop ships steamed away from Libya tonight, carrying the first units of 40,000 troops home from the Egyptian frontier and toward duty on the French border.

Withdrawal of the troops was Italy's answer to British recall of home and Oriental fleets from the Mediterranean. Count Galeazzo Ciano, foreign minister, informed Sir Eric Drummond, British Ambassador, of the movements today.

Among the commands started for home today was the mechanized Trento Division. With those who are to follow, they will be sifted out along the French frontier.

The Trento Division formerly was stationed at Alto Adige, near the Austrian frontier. However, it was explained the German-Austrian accord, bearing Italy's approval, obviates the necessity for a heavy guard in the Brenner Pass sector.

Light fortifications, erected along the Libya-Egyptian border while Anglo-Italian tension was highest, will be kept intact. Some Black Shirt units and a native division will stay, also, and the air force will be kept up to present strength. Between 80 and 100 bombers are to be in service in Libya, which may be divided into its former four provinces.

Doctors to Use Spray in Battle On Paralysis

Alabama and Tennessee to Be Testing Ground for New Method.

By the Associated Press.

Montgomery, Ala., July 13.—Federal and State health authorities today decided to make Alabama and Tennessee experimental grounds for a newly developed mass protection method against infantile paralysis, which has stricken 154 persons in outbreaks within the two States.

The new protection method—yet to prove its preventive worth among humans—has been exceptionally successful in tests with animals and does not injure humans, Dr. J. N. Baker, Alabama State health officer, said. It is a nasal spray made of a mixture of picric acid and alum.

The United States Public Health Service at Washington advised Dr. Baker that Dr. Charles Armstrong and Dr. W. T. Harrison, who developed the spray, would arrive tomorrow to lend their aid in curbing spread of the malady in up-State Alabama counties and southern Tennessee areas.

Instructions on manufacture of the spray already have been dispatched to Alabama physicians and it is being used locally. Dr. Baker said Dr. W. C. Williams, Tennessee health commissioner, joined him in asking Federal assistance.

The number of new cases declined for the second successive day in Alabama's infantile paralysis outbreak today, but health authorities warned against laxity.

Only nine new cases were reported, compared with an average of 12 a day last week. Dr. Baker said three of today's cases were from counties which previously had not reported any sufferers.

Pink Elephants Indeed

Second Precinct Policemen J. P. Zier and E. A. Fuller are struck pink by the mystery of 36 dozen pink elephants.

Exactly 432 Marched Into Precinct Station—but They're Glass; Hitch-Hiker Vanishes, and So Do Farmer's Peach; Upside-Down Photo.

True to the disconcerning tradition of pink elephants, which unlike their white brothers are not sacred, 432 pink elephants, exactly 432, were marched into the Second Precinct Police Station yesterday, with their trunks curled over their heads and their ears spread wide.

"Now, if I was a drinking man," said the sergeant, "I would know it was time to quit."

Another policeman remarked that someone must have had the horrors pretty badly to have his visions frozen into 432 little pink glass elephants.

The manifestation was discovered by Louis C. Wolf, manager of the Cowan Storage Co., 620 New York avenue, who called police when he discovered his garage had been broken open.

While checking his property, Wolf found the elephants. They shouldn't have been there.

This is a sad story, that of Charles Lewis, a Georgia farmer, who appeared at the Fourth Precinct station to ask that officers search for Pat Grinder and a load of the best Georgia peaches.

Lewis said he picked up Grinder, a hitch-hiker, on the road between here and Atlanta. He was bringing the peaches to market here. When he stopped his truck in front of the Water Street Market, Grinder said he would watch the load while Lewis had lunch.

The farmer said he came back to the truck. It was there, so were the baskets, but the peaches were gone and so was Grinder. The peaches would have brought $150, Lewis said.

"Take my pisher standin' on my head, willya?"

The sidewalk-photographer on downtown Thirteenth street yesterday, turned around and looked at the questioner.

"O. K.," he said.

The subject gravely laid a package upon the sidewalk, and, placing his hands upon the sidewalk, carefully uspended himself until his feet waved in the general direction of the sky.

Passers-by gaped.

"Geddit! Snappit!" and the photographer pressed his shutter.

Replacing his hat and picking up his package, the photographed one received his card and staggered down the street.

Veterans to Fly Famous Colors Here for Rally

Honor Guard to Accompany Flags to Second Division Reunion.

Accompanied by a guard of honor of former doughboys, the colors of six regiments which were part of the famed Second Division in the battles of Belleau Wood, St. Mihiel, Soissons and the Meuse Argonne, will be flown to Washington from Texas for the annual reunion of the Second Division, which opens here Thursday.

The colors are to be placed aboard an Army transport plane at Randolph Field, San Antonio, late today, and are expected to arrive here early tomorrow. During the dedication Saturday afternoon of the memorial monument on the Ellipse to the division's 4,200 dead, the colors coming from Texas will be massed with those of other regiments.

Acceptances to invitations to attend the convention continued to pour in yesterday from foreign countries as well as from every State. At least 4,000 members of the division are expected to take part in the three-day session, a much larger number than is customary at the annual gatherings.

Since many of the men will be accompanied by their families, a full schedule of sightseeing and entertainment has been planned for the wives and children of the veterans.

The unveiling of the $60,000 white marble memorial on the Ellipse is largely responsible for the unusually large attendance expected this year, the committee in charge of the convention believes. Thousands of the men have contributed to the cost of the monument, the contributions averaging about $1.80 from each person.

Approximately 48,000 members of the division are alive today. Organized with a strength of 28,000, more than 60,000 soldiers passed through it during the war.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief Of Pain

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are one of Nature's chief ways of taking the acids and waste out of the blood. If they don't pass 3 pints a day and so get rid of more than 3 pounds of waste matter, your 15 miles of kidney tubes may need flushing.

If you have trouble with frequent bladder passages with scanty amount which often smart and burn, the 15 miles of kidney tubes may need flushing out. This danger signal may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait for serious trouble. Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills—which have been used successfully for over 40 years by millions of people. They give happy relief and will help flush out the 15 miles of kidney tubes. Get Doan's Pills. (Advt.)

Mr. Detweiler was superintendent of the printing concern's composing room for many years. At the time of his death, however, he had sold his interest in the business and retired. His father, F. M. Detweiler, and the late John Judd established the business in 1868.

Detweiler is survived by his wife, Mrs. Rosa Detweiler, and two grandsons.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow at Hysong's funeral parlors, 1300 N street.

"Never Their Prejudice."

The character of the Presidential campaign, unfortunately, was not automatically determined by Gov. Landon's assurance that he would "address the intelligence of men, never their prejudice, passion or ignorance." The Republican nominee may be expected to hold rigorously to that admirable pledge, but the campaign can still be dirty if others desire to make it so.

Evidence of this is found in the discernible beginnings of a whispering campaign, supplemented by at least one printed story carefully devoid of any tangible basis, intimating rather than saying that Gov. Landon is perhaps susceptible to religious and racial prejudices. The attack is not pointed directly at Mr. Landon but at the new Republican national chairman, John Hamilton, who is accused, according to unverified "reports," of being "anti-Semitic."

Such tactics, of course, serve a double purpose. What is said about the campaign manager by innuendo applies to the candidate. And by directing the charges in this manner it is possible to drive a wedge between the two, according to the old device of injuring the morale of a boxer by spreading calumnies about his trainer. There is nothing new about the method. But it becomes particularly unsavory when dangerous prejudices are invoked to give it force.

It is not likely that this particular whispering campaign will get anywhere. It is totally devoid of factual evidence and is as completely out of character with respect to Mr. Hamilton as it would be with regard to Gov. Landon. The record of the latter, from the time of his courageous fight against the Klan in Kansas 12 years ago to his recent denunciation of religious persecutions in Germany, is of itself sufficient exposure of the absurdity of such a slander.

But the absurdity of whispered charges is not enough to end them if they are launched with a malevolent purpose, along lines in which prejudice is too often all-powerful. There are manipulators of public opinion who operate on the thoroughly cynical assumption that if enough mud is skillfully thrown, some of it will stick. Against such tactics, at this early stage of the campaign, all thoughtful voters will be alertly on guard, regardless of their affiliation. For it is only too clear that any temporary partisan advantage thus gained would be at the lasting expense of national welfare.

The Twelve-Hour Day.

In these days of labor-saving machinery and widespread unemployment, it is shocking to find any group of men or women working regular 12-hour shifts. So far as our major industries are concerned the 12-hour day is now merely an unpleasant memory. Employers in general have discovered that it is neither humane nor profitable to keep workers at their duties for such long consecutive periods. Certainly it is time for hospitals, where overwork and nervous strain may easily cause fatal results, to accept the same conclusion.

Conditions that have developed under the 12-hour day at Gallinger Municipal Hospital are notorious. In many instances the health of nurses has been broken. Overwork has left young girls vulnerable to tuberculosis and other diseases. Congress has persistently ignored their appeals for more enlightened treatment, but sooner or later public opinion will force the adoption of modern standards.

At least four hospitals in Washington have abandoned the 12-hour day for nurses. Indications are that Emergency Hospital is about to follow their example. Already student nurses in that institution are on an 8-hour basis and the graduate nurses employed by the hospital are on duty less than 12 hours. Only nurses privately employed by patients of that institution continue on the longer shift. Their dignified and moderate appeal for shorter hours, with reduced pay, appears to have made a favorable impression both upon the physicians with whom they work and upon the hospital management. No doubt a satisfactory adjustment will soon be worked out.

This steady movement toward shorter hours for nurses further accentuates the deplorable conditions in the District's own institutions. The government of the National Capital ought to lead in the establishment of reasonable working conditions, instead of lagging behind private institutions. Unless the appeals from Gallinger are soon recognized, it will be the only hospital in Washington still adhering to a working schedule characteristic of slavery.

Trade And Trade Pacts.

The upturn in our foreign trade, which began about the middle of 1933 and is still continuing, is due primarily to a world-wide improvement in economic conditions. Since the United States started rather belatedly to participate in this recovery movement the gains in both the export and import trade have continued with few interruptions of the upward trend. As a result, exports for the first five months of the current year reached a level not far short of that attained during the corresponding period in 1931 and were 14 per cent higher than a year ago. Imports, which have been increasing at a more rapid rate than exports of late, slightly exceeded the totals reported for the first five months of 1931 and were 16 per cent above the figures of 1935.

Although the value of our foreign trade is still far below the level of the years preceding the collapse of 1929, the gains are pronounced and the outlook is encouraging. Indeed, there is perceptible danger that supporters of the Administration may try to make political capital out of the foreign trade showing by attributing recent gains to the liberalizing effects of the reciprocal trade treaties. On the other hand, critics of the Administration are at least as likely to muddy the waters of debate by citing the expansion of the import trade as evidence that tariff bargaining is placing domestic industry at the mercy of foreign competitors.

Such arguments betray either ignorance of the facts or a deliberate distortion of their meaning. The course of our foreign trade has so far been affected but slightly by the conclusion of reciprocal trade agreements. Only a few of the trade treaties have been operative long enough to test their efficacy and even in those few cases, changes in the value and volume of trade cannot be attributed exclusively to the agreements. Undoubtedly, recent pronounced increases in our commerce with Cuba are due largely to the trade pact. But Cuba occupies an exceptional position, in any case, because of the preferential treatment accorded her products in this market, and her inclusion in the sugar control plan.

Imports from Belgium, which have likewise risen markedly as compared with a year ago, are partly due to the concessions granted under the trade treaty concluded with that country. However, Belgium's total sales abroad expanded greatly following devaluation of her currency, and it is impossible to tell what proportion of the increase in shipments to the United States is due to that factor alone. In any case, the amount involved is a small sum compared with total increases in our foreign trade.

It is also worth noting that the percentage rise in our exports to Canada during the present year is no greater than the average rate of increase in all exports and less than the percentage gains reported in our exports to Great Britain. While Canadian imports have risen at a somewhat more rapid rate than all imports, they, too, have been outstripped by the gains in imports from Great Britain, a country with which we have made no reciprocal trade agreement.

In short, any objective survey of the trade statistics shows that gains in both our export and import trade have been widely distributed and have been due to innumerable causes unconnected with the reciprocal trade agreements. The State Department's efforts to expand our foreign trade by eliminating hampering barriers to an exchange of goods is a laudable undertaking. It would, however, be a grave mistake to exaggerate the actual extent of the gains already achieved or in prospect. They are not attributable to any single cause and they are certainly not a product of policy.

The tendency of imports to increase more rapidly than exports is likewise due to causes unconnected with trade treaties, although tariff concessions, of course, increase our imports of certain articles. The trend toward a better balance between our merchandise exports and imports has been in evidence for some time. It is the outgrowth of inescapable readjustments forced upon us by our position as a creditor nation.

With or without trade agreements, we must accept goods in exchange if we expect to be paid for our exports and receive any return on capital invested abroad. The State Department has consciously recognized that fact and is trying to expand our export trade by removing barriers to increases in the import trade. In so doing it is very constructively accepting the conditions that provide a sound basis for a continued growth of our foreign trade.

Vice In Washington.

All evidence indicates that the unfortunate woman, who was mutilated and left to die by assailants presumed to have connections with a New York vice ring, was in Washington only by chance. Apparently she feared some such reprisals as occurred and merely happened to select this city for a hideaway. Police are confident that no tentacle of the New York gang extends to Washington.

The fact is that Washington may congratulate itself on virtual freedom from organized prostitution. For this the Police Department is due full credit. Particularly since the raising of the fine for soliciting from $25 to $100, and the jail term from 30 to 90 days, the police have done remarkable work in keeping the city reputable. This does not suggest, however, that vigilance is unnecessary to maintain the city's present enviable position.

Aid to the police in keeping check on this and other community problems is expected from the newly organized Washington Crime Commission. Designed to provide a co-operative "follow-up" on all police cases, it is now engaged in compiling back records on which to base its future operations.

In respect to the control of prostitution, the commission might do well to consider the loopholes in the local law through which vice can still persist here. Rulings which now impede efforts to stamp out what disorderly establishments remain would be profitably revised if sufficient public opinion were marshaled by the commission to demand it.

Interest Rates And Recovery.

Reductions in interest rates, ranging from one-half of 1 per cent to 1 per cent on various classes of outstanding RFC loans, have been announced by Chairman Jones. He explains that the corporation is able to lower its charges because it has accumulated an operating reserve regarded as sufficient to cover contingencies and also because of the very low rates at which the Treasury can now borrow the funds which it advances to the RFC. However, Mr. Jones places his chief emphasis upon the stimulus to recovery afforded by more favorable treatment of RFC borrowers.

Since Mr. Jones has consistently preached the doctrine that lower interest rates are an aid to business recovery, it was to be expected that he would reduce RFC rates to the lowest level which he can defend as consistent with safety. However, it would be naive to ignore the possibility that other reasons, not of a strictly theoretical or financial nature, may also have had their influence.

Mr. Jones may have reflected upon the political wisdom of keeping RFC debtors as grateful and contented as possible during the critical months preceding a Presidential election. And it is conceivable that he welcomes a lower rate because it reduces the incentive for the stronger RFC borrowers to pay off loans and obtain needed funds from private sources.

While lower interest charges will, as Mr. Jones states, enable borrowers to liquidate their debts more easily, they will also attract some new borrowers and will certainly tend to discourage large-scale repayments at the present time. Yet the withdrawal of the Government from the emergency lending field is a consummation greatly to be desired. Indeed, it is doubtful whether the limited stimulus to recovery from a reduction of interest charges on Government loans would be anything like that resulting from a more rapid shift of such debts to nongovernmental lending agencies.

After interest rates have been reduced to a reasonable basis, moreover, the assumption that further reductions are always an aid to business recovery is based upon a one-sided consideration of the problems of debt creation. Borrowers in distress may be unable to pay a fair rate of return on loans and it may be essential to reduce the amount of charges. Such emergency action, however, should be sharply differentiated from policies which aim at a radical and progressive lowering of interest rates chiefly on the ground that recovery is thereby hastened.

At the present time, it is extremely important to revive normal demands for new investment capital and encourage people to save and invest in private undertakings. The excessively low rates of interest ruling for Government securities have been achieved during a period of deficit financing with resultant credit inflation. A large volume of private obligations has been refinanced because of the plethora of idle funds in banks and the prevailing low rates of interest.

But as against the relief to debtors from refunding operations, account has to be taken of the discouragement to thrift resulting from very low interest rates and the unwillingness of investors to risk a loss of capital for small rewards. These are factors retarding the long overdue revival of the market for new capital issues and essential recovery in the capital goods industries.

Einstein says there's no such thing as matter; Dr. Asnis asserts that space doesn't exist; and Sir Arthur Eddington declares that the entire universe is merely the figment of man's imagination. Well, well, well—and just to think of all the unnecessary worrying we've been doing all these years!

Literary Boondoggling.

From the Saturday Review of Literature.

Very little sound and perceptive criticism of literature has resulted from all the mass of investigation sponsored by American scholarship since the Germans taught us how to do research, and of that little, only a few books, though these distinguished, have come from professional scholars . . . Boondoggling, real boondoggling, began, one fears, in American scholarship.

Of these boondogglers the source hunters are the worst because they are usually the most honest, the most successful in earning their pay for work accomplished, and the most short-sighted. A list of theses, or a table of contents of a scholarly journal, supplies evidence only too convincing that to show where Writer A derived some of his ideas, some of his phrasing, establishes the claim of the author of the research to the proud title of scholar. It is not enough; and the fiction that the whole duty of the scholar is to dig out the facts upon which other men may build conclusions, should be exposed for what it is, a counsel of laziness or an excuse for the limitations of a mediocre mind.

Behind The Poll.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The steady slump in Roosevelt popularity as registered by the latest American Institute of Public Opinion to the new low of 51.8 per cent in July ought to make the New Dealers take stock of this constant recession of public favor.

In my opinion, the reasons for this steady decline are:

1. Farleyism—The junking or sabotage of the whole Civil Service, replacing it with rotten political patronage of the worst sort.

2. Hypocrisy—The Leader makes beautiful, flowery, idealistic speeches, but his Democratic followers line their pockets with graft, as in West Virginia, Pennsylvania and many other places. Apparently The Leader has no control over his machine whatsoever.

3. Betrayal of the farmers and workers—Administration Leader Robinson and Democrats killed the Frazier-Lemke bill to enable farmers to pay off their mortgages. They killed the Black 30-hour-week bill which is designed to take up the 12,000,000 unemployed due to technological displacement. These two bills were more important than any others passed or introduced this past session.

4. Refusal of Democratic Administration leaders to face the Constitutional issue—The childish manner of trying to make the Supreme Court the "goat" when all that is needed is an amendment or two clearly stating the objectives (if any) of the New Deal. Slurs at the Supreme Court as "those nine old men" are not constructive. Justice Holmes was one of the oldest and most liberal members. Age is not a campaign issue. Many old men today are more liberal than young.

5. A weak Secretary of Agriculture—Wallace was appointed because he controlled or owned a string of farm papers, propaganda agencies. In the face of a terrific drought, the second one, the folly of "creating prosperity by plowing under crops" is evident. His policies are nebulous, vacillating and uneconomic. ARISTOTLE.

Slums And Crime.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: To your recent communications on progress and crime I would like to add that progress is being long delayed in the prevention of crime, while the detection of crime advances in seven league boots. The more fundamental problem of crime prevention lags slowly behind.

There are three important phases relative to crime: crime prevention, penal treatment, and crime detection. The success of these three will become effective according to the degree of public response. This means that public interest and action should be militantly exerted, for example, legally to abolish slums with fair compensation to their owners.

Quoting from one of your correspondents, "If progress is infinite, are crime and crime prevention mere action and reaction: opposite and equal?" I take this to mean that a certain set of actual conditions, such as slums, are the direct cause of crime. The slums start the ball rolling on the road to crime. The final reaction is a large crop of criminals for whose existence society is largely responsible and is as well the sufferer.

MRS. ISABEL VICKERS.

Blue Ridge Summit, Pa., July 5.

The P. M. G.'s Leave.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: An atmosphere of squalor surrounds the "leave" of Cabinet Officer Farley. The President did not rule that Jim could not legally solicit contributions while on leave. Some wit suggested that no law could stop him from receiving such love tokens eagerly sent in by those in the service, whether by wireless or rubber-stamp request.

The delayed apology for the P. M. G. in his failure to resign turns on the effect of such resignation. It would be an admission of guilt. A confession that Senator Norris and other believers in civil service reform were right in their condemnation of the low political methods employed by Farley.

The President must bear the burden. But why worry so much about Farley and his Tammany outfit? New York as the home of business, big and little, is definitely against the taxation schemes of the Administration. No defender of present theories of finance in government can claim that New York will indorse the President. As for Farley, he is now out as completely as Joe Louis, the Brown Bomber. Farley is the Gone-Wronger.

Christianity And Capitalism.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Mason is apparently entirely out of touch with conditions as they have existed in the United States during the postwar period. He deals only with conditions which long since have passed away. Rip Van Winkle had nothing on him! Appealing to motives of greed instead of backing the Christian motive of service to mankind as a whole, regardless of race, nationality or color, is inconsistent. How can we back Christian ethics and support feudalistic or capitalistic policies?

Real Christianity and capitalism never did harmonize; the former is allowed to exist only by surrendering periodically to the hordes of international finance capitalism which insists that the rest of us be "nationalistic patriots" while itself functioning internationally! But the age of ruthless competition is drawing to a disgraceful close and Christians are again resuming their constructive functions in the churches. There they are challenging the injustices of the present economic (dis)order which is the direct and logical result of a greedy, grasping, individualistic anarchy in production and distribution. Yet it also functions collectivistically within the framework of the economic system. Thus we see paradox piled upon paradox. Individualism is advocated by the economic autocracy for the masses, but capitalistic collectivism is what is actually practiced by finance capitalism which knows no national boundaries.

Christians who have really sought after truth instead of idolizing "Churchianity," which latter institution Christ always opposed bitterly, find that real Christian ethics and finance capitalism are mutually and irrevocably antagonistic because based on opposite principles of conduct. A. CHRISTIAN.

Mr. Murphy's Candidacy.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Supplementing your graceful tribute to Mr. Frank Murphy, High Commissioner to the Philippine Republic, on leave during the campaign, may I suggest that you make further comment on the effect on his prestige and influence if, as seems likely, he is defeated for Governor of Michigan and returns to the Philoppines a man repudiated by the people of his own State? We are told that "loss of face" is a very serious matter with Eastern people.

Jim Farley is always a practical politician, making little or no effort to conceal his motives or to defend his ethical standards. But the benign Mr. Roosevelt would have us think otherwise of himself. And if we who are unwilling to regard ourselves as subjects of his gracious majesty—not believing him to be either gracious or majesty and still believing our democratic form of government best—if we believe that he is every bit as willing and anxious as Farley to have Murphy risk any loss or sacrifice for the success of Roosevelt, it is because this action of his is quite in line with previous instances of his recklessness and unreliability in speech and selfishness viciousness in his acts.

Wealth In America.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Communists and others in this country have in recent years sought to condemn capitalism or what they choose to call "concentration of the Nation's wealth in the hands of a few." Let me say here that in most instances these wealthy gentlemen have started at the bottom of the financial ladder and by dint of hard work and real use of their brains, have obtained their wealth and so are entitled and welcome to it, as far as I am concerned.

There are many Americans today who have better opportunities than these "capitalists" had when they began but there are but few rugged individualists left who have the brains, the courage and the stamina to work hard enough and to make the sacrifices to attain such goal. Instead they prefer to sit and whine like puppies about the "wealth in the hands of a few."

What could the average American or the United States Government, for that matter, do with the wealth and the businesses of Messrs. Ford, Rockefeller, Hearst, Morgan, Macfadden, DuPont, Mellon et al. Would there be any wealth or businesses left after a short time under either management? The answer is decidedly no.

On Passing Street Cars.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The writer is interested in knowing whether or not anything can be done about automobiles and taxi cabs failing to stop when passengers are getting on and off street cars. Not only do the automobiles and the cabs not stop but they fail to slow down their speed.

I have lived in other cities but had never seen this condition before coming to Washington. A. L. A.

An Honest Lawyer.

It was a gracious thought which led the American Bar Association to present a memorial window in honor of St. Ives to the cathedral at Treguier in France. The ceremony of presentation took place recently on the feast day of the saint. The window is of stained glass, 20 feet high and 6 feet wide. On its base it bears the seal of the Department of State and an inscription saying that it was presented by the bar of the United States in homage to the patron saint of lawyers.

The son of Brittany, who sleeps in the cathedral, won his chief fame in life because he was an honest lawyer. A biographical sketch in the Catholic encyclopedia, after remarking upon his zeal in his profession and as "official" of the bishop of Treguier, concludes with these words: "He is the patron saint of lawyers, though not, it is said, their model, for—'Sanctus Ivo erat Brito, Advocatus et non latro, Res miranda populo.'"

The Latin may loosely be translated, "Saint Ives was a Breton, an advocate and not a robber, whereat the people marveled exceedingly." Lawyers, it appears, were not held so high in popular esteem in the thirteenth century as they are held in the twentieth.

Nowadays, the people would scarcely marvel at a lawyer who was not also a crook—almost everybody knows one. But it is significant that even then sanctity attached to a lawyer who displayed "great zeal and rectitude in the discharge of his duty," as the encyclopedia phrases it, who resisted unjust taxation, who by his charity earned for himself the title of advocate and patron of the poor.

In seeking to do honor to his memory, the American Bar Association does honor to itself; compatriots of its members will prefer to believe that they are firmly resolved to make him their model as well as their patron.

The Post Impressionist

All Beer And Skittles.

Post Office, Tuesday.

IF prohibition repeal has proved nothing else, it has proved that American drinkers are not like the drinkers of many another country. At least, it has proved this in one respect which touches an ancient drinking tradition—proved it to the satisfaction of certain American lawmakers.

Whether their decision will receive ultimate popular endorsement remains to be seen. What is at present abundantly evident is the fact that, for good or ill, the legislators in question either have already barred the bar's safer side to women or are seriously considering such action.

The employment of women as barmaids or waitresses in places serving intoxicating liquors has been forbidden by law in Massachusetts,

Rhode Island
Connecticut,
Nevada.

And now, an able editorial in the Virginian-Pilot of Norfolk informs us, things have come to such a pass in Portsmouth, Va., beer-parlors—and recently came to such a pass in the beer-parlors of Norfolk itself—that the Dominion may soon find it necessary to follow the example of puritanic Nevada and those southerly States of the New England group.

And yet:

Abroad, from earliest times—from the very foundation of Olympus, in fact—there has ever been approval for women servers of wines, beers and spiritous drinks. There has even been high precedent.

Only a noisy minority of reformers could have put the shepherd Ganymede in Hebe's position. She alone—the goddess who restored lost youth, mind you; the founder of the beauty parlor—handed the Greek gods their nectar, until (silly soul!) she gave up a good job, surrendered her economic independence, for the wedding ring of Heracles. And, though some extreme abstainers may argue that nectar was a temperance-drink, authentic records evidence its more than merely inspirational powers.

All over Europe there are, and always have been, women serving drinks in inns, saloons and restaurants. But, of course, the custom comes to its finest fruition in the isle of Albion.

What if she be without mu variety? The English Barmaid one of those British institutio which age cannot wither or custom stale. Her somewhat rugged features, her somewhat high coloring, may be a disappointment to the foreigner who has read too much about her; he may find her ready wit a trifle too sharp and more than a trifle too Rabelaisian. But she is almost a caryatid of the British Constitution—and, if she isn't quite that, it's no fault of the physique of the average British Barmaid.

The best English poets sing her. The best English portrait-painters—if there can be said to be any left—celebrate her. The younger aristocracy have been known to marry her. She adorned the Mermaid Tavern in the reign of the chaste Elizabeth; she still mixes the infinitesimal, but delicious, concoction that passes for a Dry Martini at the Savoy Bar.

If any party in parliamentary power ever tried to do away with the British Barmaid, there would be a ministerial fall and a general election tomorrow. She is eternal.

Nevertheless, and as you have just seen, in the American legislative mind the opinion seems to be gaining ground that she is not exportable, and that American imitations are unsuccessful.

Portsmouth's experience would appear to indicate that the barmaid, in this country, has none of the maternal instincts of her overseas sister and little of that sister's ability to supplement a facile mirth with a practical aloofness. The American sample—so the Portsmouth and Norfolk critics aver—won't restrain a customer's thirst when restraint would be to his benefit; her eye, they say, is all for the profit of the house; she sells to men who have already had what the British Hebe calls "a fair skinful." And the American sample—though we still quote only these same critics—is apt to consent both to dance with the patrons and to drink with them.

It was Emerson who said: "God made yeast as well as dough, and loves fermentation just as dearly as He loves vegetation." Perhaps it could be plausibly pleaded that God made barmaids, too. But the legislators of Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut and Nevada—probably also those of a forthcoming Virginia Assembly— would add: "Not, however, for the bars of America."

* * *

It is one of the several subjects upon which the Post-Impressionist, in any case, pretends to no opinion. So far as the Great Barmaid Problem is concerned, our interest is in the opinions of other people.

We wonder what Mrs. Kestler and the rest of the feminists are going to say about this tendency to shut, upon women, the door of another gainful occupation.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler.

Musical Larceny.

Meaning neither aid nor comfort for the soulless corporations of the radio industry, these dispatches have a feeling that the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers sometimes undertakes a type of brain picking no less deplorable than that of the broadcasting firms which would like to make free use of the nation's songs.

Gene Buck, late of the Ziegfeld establishment, a composer who has contributed a few honest tinkles of his own to the American rhythm, is president of the society and one of the best informal lobbyists in the country. Starting from scratch, he organized a union of poets and composers and by the sunshine of a cordial but canny disposition put through laws and agreements to protect the authors' property rights and collect fair royalties for the use of their material. But for Mr. Buck all songs would have been treated as the property of everybody in general and nobody in particular, like the air.

Mr. Buck is well acquainted in Washington, where he surely has done his cause no harm by helping out around some of the gridiron shows, and his strength is as the strength of ten because his heart is pure. A Broadway man for many years, he shared with the late Tommy Meighan a reputation for moral cleanliness which is downright spectacular in such surroundings. He does not drink intoxicants or swear too much.

Mr. Buck is hell on infringement and makes the soulless corporation of the radio shower down cash money for every rendition of any song whose copyright belongs to any member of his union. A laudable work all this, to be sure, but Mr. Buck admitted, when your correspondent raised the point, that many favorite American songs of the last two years were not original compositions, but jobs of body-snatching from the weed-grown graves of men long dead. He agreed, specifically, that three prosperous hits of the last decade or so, all very much alike, were too much like an old English song, and that one of these derivations had even imitated the name of the English song, which, in turn, resembled an old German song of similar title.

He could trace two copyrighted American songs straight to "Three Blind Mice," which the Republicans in Cleveland adopted for their theme tune, and he acknowledged other debts to dead men which could be proved in a few seconds on any piano. The most notorious feat of grave-robbing in American music, in which the ghoul plundered the works of three old masters, combining the best elements into one highly profitable whole, Mr. Buck conceded without debate.

"That," Mr. Buck said, was larceny, and I'm against it, and so is the society. I go around deploring larceny all the time. In fact, that was why I deplored the methods of the radio up to a few years ago. Those bums just sat back and let our boys do their stuff and put it on the air and played it to death without even saying they were much obliged. They said they were advertising the songs to millions of people who would rush out and buy phonograph records. A lot of records people are going to buy when they can turn a dial and get the same song for nothing!"

But, your correspondent persisted, if the radio should refuse to pay royalties on a stolen tune would he insist on fighting the case?

Mr. Buck said the society would fight if the song were protected by copyright, even though the best opinion among the composers themselves agreed that it was filched from one of the old song books. The old song books, incidentally, seem to be an important source of current copyright material, and Mr. Buck's only explanation of that was that there are only so many strings on a fiddle, so many notes on a horn. Often, when a composer with rubber-stamp tendencies, is out of original ideas, he finds himself repeating old combinations of sound which were favorites long ago.

Yet Victor Herbert, the god of the society, managed to avoid similarity, and such men as Kern, Gershwin, Friml and Vincent Youmans, among the proud names on the roster, are generally credited with having rolled their own from home-grown materials.

It seems slightly ironic that art-larcenists, notorious among their colleagues for their mining operations in the graveyards of music, should be permitted to come into court to protect their rights in stolen property.

Fritz Kreisler Appeals Income Assessment

By the Associated Press.

Fritz Kreisler, the violinist, appealed a $52,654 income-tax deficiency assessment to the Board of Tax Appeals yesterday, contending the Treasury had computed his net taxable income erroneously.

The Treasury said Kreisler received $114,132 from contracts in 1933, the year at issue, and in addition received royalties and made profits in stock transactions.

Kreisler argued he should have been allowed deductions for various expenses. He paid a tax of $8,780 for 1933.

Hindenburg Refuels For Return Flight

Lakehurst, N. J., July 13 (AP).—The German dirigible Hindenburg swung at anchor at an outdoor mooring mast of the U. S. Naval Air Station tonight after a flight across the North Atlantic marked by its first experience with heavy fog.

The giant airship, carrying a capacity load of 50 passengers, was moored at 6:43 a. m. (Eastern standard time), 63 hours, 37 minutes after weighing off from its home port at Frankfort-on-Main.

Refueling operations were begun in preparation for the start of its return trip between 9 and 11 p. m. tomorrow.

Reed Praises U. S. Constitution; Calls Grant of Power Adequate

Solicitor General Tells Public Affairs Institute It Sets No Rigid Limits on Necessary Governmental Processes; Press Discussed.

By the Associated Press.

University, Va., July 13.—The Constitution is not a "code of laws" written to meet specific conditions, but "a statement of principles" that delegates to the Federal Government "adequate powers to deal with modern problems," Solicitor General Stanley Reed said tonight in addressing the University of Virginia public affairs institute.

"Few dissent from the ultimate aim of social and economic legislation of the past few years," he said. "Old age and unemployment assistance, relief to distress, aid to labor in its struggle for recognition, bank insurance, the protection of investors, wide dissemination of opportunities for the utilization of electric power, the protection of children, have a strong appeal to the mind and heart of America.

"Surely the founding fathers . . . could not have intended their government to be helpless in the emergencies of today. We have attained political freedom. We move towards social justice. It cannot be that the effort to attain that ideal may fairly be pilloried as contrary to the Constitution or as subversive of the American system of government.

Cannot Have Rigid Limits.

"The opportunity and the necessity for the Government's service to its people cannot be confined within rigid limits. The Constitution sets no such bounds. It is a living, vital institution whose function is to guide and not to curb necessary governmental processes. So to construe and apply our organic law, to adapt its powers to the great ideal of social justice for the governed, is truly to preserve, to protect and to defend the Constitution of our United States."

America still adheres to the philosophy of individualism that flourished in the days when the Constitution was written, the Solicitor General told his audience, but the concentration of industrial and financial resources has created new conditions for which new solutions must be found.

"Regretfully but inevitably we must adjust our lives and our Government to modern needs and find, in a Constitution written for a simpler era, guidance for the problems of our present age."

Asserting that interpretation of specific clauses of the Constiution must be left to the judiciary, the advocate who has argued important New Deal legislation before the Supreme Court struck out at organizations that have "been formed, and curiously enough have succeeded in attracting subscriptions and members, whose sole declared purpose is 'to defend and uphold the Constitution of the United States' and to disseminate information for that purpose.

Appear as Interpreters.

"By an intemperance of thought and word, rarely equaled, these self-appointed guardians of the Constitution have attempted to arrogate to themselves a position as interpreters for the American people of the authority conferred by that document."

He declared the present Administration clearly acknowledged the authority of the courts in interpreting the Constitution, and pointed out that it had not only discontinued enforcement of legislation declared unconstitutional, but had obtained repeal of acts apparently invalidated by the reasoning of the decision outlawing the AAA.

Disagreements as to interpretation are inevitable because of the general terms of the "great clauses" defining Federal power, he said, and debate as to their meaning has raged since adoption of the Constitution.

The duty of the American press to see that the public is thoroughly informed on the national election campaign was stressed in an address by Jerome D. Barnum.

Heads American Publishers.

Barnum is president of the American Newspaper Publishers Association and publisher of the Syracuse (N. Y.) Post-Standard.

"We now face a national election," he said. "Many think it will be the most momentous since the republic was formed.

"It is the duty of the American press in the maintenance of its trust to keep the people's rights for a free press, to see that the American public is thoroughly informed on all the important issues of the campaign, as well as all of the important utterances and activities of the candidates.

"This duty has a double significance now in the molding of public opinion because there has come a new and different force in avenue of communications between the rivals and the public.

"That new force is the radio. It brings the public in intimate contact with the voice of the speaker with an unusual appeal to emotion rather than to reasoned judgment resulting from the printed word in the newspaper.

"Millions who will turn the dials to campaign orators may form quick superficial opinions for or against men or issues immediately following the conclusion of the addresses.

Newspapers' Responsibility.

"Then the great responsibility of the newspaper comes into play, for after the voice has died away, the newspaper prints the speech, or adequate summaries of it, as straight news service to readers. Then the editor, reading the text, will be able to give his readers a cool, deliberate, mature judgment of its arguments.

"Deliberation makes for accuracy in interpretation and the newspaper editorials will be studied by the readers for their guidance in forming their final opinions on the matters which they have heard over the radio.

"Our newspapers, in justification of their constitutional liberty welcome this opportunity of service to their readers in the forthcoming campaign that the wheat shall be separated from the chaff; that propaganda shall not overcome fact; that truth and performance shall prevail over promise and repudiation, so that each citizen can make for himself a clear and conscientious decision.

"Regardless of the outcome of the national election, the American press will continue its unselfish fight for the perpetuation for freedom of press and freedom of speech."

"Today," the speaker added, "we can say with assurance that the daily press has more power in the shaping of public opinion than any other force in America."

Economy of Scarcity Assailed.

Declaring that Americans had never had enough to eat "during any year in our history," Harold Loeb, New York attorney, pleaded for a scientific attack on an economy of scarcity"

"We permit to exist at the same time," he told the round table on the American political scene, "abject destitution and no work. Something is wrong without economic system. We do not know how to manage our national house."

An assessment of the economic resources of the Nation compared with a national survey of potential productive capacity constitutes a part of the effort being made to solve the problem by scientific approach, he said

Dr. Benjamin B Kendrick, historian of the University of North Carolina, told the same round table, that Democrats and Republicans have been shifting their stand upon a rigid interpretation of the Constitution since the early days, depending upon whether they "were in or out of power"

Republicans in the approaching campaign, he said, will take "the honored position first given classical expression by Thomas Jefferson before the responsibilities of administering the Government fell upon him."

The Democrats, he said, will defend the loose construction "just as this same Thomas Jefferson did when once in power."

Voting Majority Propertyless.

"Both parties realize," Dr. Kendrick said, "that the majority of the voters are propertyless or nearly so. Fortunately for them this mass is not coherent and class conscious to any degree. If it were, the present party division would disappear instantly and instead of a life and death struggle between Roosevelt and Landon and Thomas or Browder."

William L. Chenery, editor of Colliers and a native Virginian, pictured as one of the "characteristics that magazines are able to render public opinion" as that of making thoughtful inquiries and writing deliberately.

He said the magazine stood somewhere between the daily newspaper and the "historian whose inquiries come too long after an event to affect it."

Firm Denies 5 Dionnes Own Word 'Quintuplets'

Philadelphia, July 13 (AP). — The Blossom Products Corporation, of Allentown, in answer to a suit brought in behalf of the Dionne quintuplets, contended today that the word "quintuplets" is an English word to which the Dionnes have no exclusive right.

David A. Croll, minister of public welfare of Ontario Province and a guardian of the children, who sued in Federal Court, claimed use of the word "quintuplets" and its various contractions in the marketing of childrens' cloth which the company manufactures was misleading to the public and damaging to the Dionnes.

Wallace Lashes Propagandists And Alarmists

Secretary Denies Danger of Food Shortage as Drought Result.

By the Associated Press.

Colorado Springs, Colo., July 13.—Henry A. Wallace, Secretary of Agriculture, lashed out tonight at "alarmists and propagandists" who, he charged, "have tried for their own purposes to scare the consumer about food scarcity" as a result of the drought.

Reciting steps the Government contemplates to aid drought-harassed farmers, particularly in the Middle West, the Secretary, in a radio address, said purchases of livestock for which no feed was available will be handled so that neither consumers nor growers are penalized.

"There is no likelihood now of anything approaching a national food shortage," Wallace said.

"We are much better supplied with food for livestock than we were in 1934. There is an ample supply of vegetables and other food.

"Even if the corn crop in the Middle West should be cut severely, the effect would not be felt immediately. In time it would be translated into higher prices for pork. Hogs, or most of them at any rate, are raised on corn. Any shortage in the grain inevitably reduces the pork supply a year later, but on the whole there is no excuse for substantial increases in food prices now. The persons who are using the drought as an excuse to increase their profits are taking advantage of human suffering."

Summarizes Situation.

Summarizing the drought situation the Secretary, who is vacationing in the Pike Peak region, said, "it is a matter for national concern. * * * Thousands of farmers will need all the help we can give regardless of the weather in days to come."

The Government, Wallace said, "was prepared to take care of the drought in 1934—and it is prepared this year."

"The adjustment program was modified in 1934 to meet the drought. Changes have been made in the agricultural conservation program that will enable payments to farmers who fail to grow soil conserving crops through no fault of their own. Other modifications are intended to increase production of food and feed."

The Secretary pointed out that "Congress appropriated about $500,000,000 for drought relief in 1934" but that such an appropriation is not available this year.

"But we have made funds available," he said, "and the President wants everything done that can be done to relieve distress."

"Among other things, the Department of Agriculture is perfecting plans for a livestock purchase program, but even if there is no break in the dry weather I do not believe we will have to buy as many cattle as we did 1934. We purchased 8,280,143 head of cattle alone as a result of drought."

Hope to Maintain Prices.

The Secretary assured "we hope to conduct any buying operations that may be necessary so they will not artificially stimulate prices, but neither is there any intention of letting the forced liquidation of meat animals beat prices down to unduly low levels."

He said "the very existence of drought is held by some to prove the fallacy of preparation on a national scale for the solution of agriculture's production and conservation problems.

"I am convinced that the events of the past four years, drought included, tell us that a sound national program for agriculture is not only necessary but that it is imperative.

"The first programs of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration were adjustment programs. They were intended to prevent additions to surpluses already mountainous, and whose crushing effects upon prices caused misery in city and country alike. I wonder how those who feel that huge supplies are an unmitigated blessing can explain the fact that with all the food and feed on hand in 1932 the bread lines were never longer, nor suffering and hunger more intense."

The Secretary described as "naive" an "impression in some quarters that the huge surpluses of 1932 and 1933 would still be with us as a reserve against possible emergency had it not been for the adjustment programs."

Would Have Had Adjustment.

"We would have had adjustment," he said, "partly by the drought and partly by the bankruptcy of the hundreds of thousands of farmers who would have been forced upon charity. They could not have been for the help of their Government. Many people who want the farmer to have help with his problems favor adjustment. They favor a cruel, unreasonable and far-reaching kind of adjustment—the adjustment which comes when production is curtailed for the simple reason that producers can no longer get the tools and seed with which to grow crops for market.

The Secretary renewed his charge that industry had not kept pace in the economic procession, saying:

"Alarmists and propagandists have tried for their own purposes to scare the consumer from time to time about food scarcity. But the real scarcity in recent years has been a scarcity of good jobs and not a scarcity of food. Even in years of the most severe drought, like 1934, agriculture produces enough food to keep all our people from starving, and, incidentally, in that terrible drought year agriculture produced closer to 1929 standards than did industry.

"Yes, job scarcity is a far more horrible thing than so-called drought scarcity, and it is a problem more susceptible to treatment by man."

Later he said, " . . . I would like to see the people of the United States, after adequate discussion, use the experience of those unusual years to work out actuarially sound plans for a combination of crop insurance and the ever normal granary, especially for wheat in the Northwest and Southwest where weather is so variable from year to year."

Back From the Sun-Baked West

Harris & Ewing.

Assistant Resettlement Administrator Joseph L. Dailey (left) and W. W. Alexander conferring on the report they submitted yesterday to Administrator Tugwell after their return from a 17-day inspection trip of the drought area. Their report was followed immediately by an announcement by Tugwell of plans to distribute $3,000,000 in direct grants to aid the Dakotas, Montana and Wyoming.

sands of farmers who would have been forced upon charity."

Other Government moves yesterday to meet the drought-relief program, as 100-degree temperatures continued for the eleventh day in the vital crop regions, included:

Forty-nine more counties were tagged as emergency drought counties, bringing the total to 385 in 12 States, where relief will be concentrated.

Discuss Cattle Purchase.

The Interdepartmental Drought Committee discussed a cattle-purchase program all afternoon, and the probability was high that a plan similar to that of 1934 when $114,000,000 was spent buying drought-stricken cattle would be set in motion this week.

The RA asked for $2,000,000, in addition to its other funds, to use in granting feed loans to farmers unable to feed or move their stock.

Administrator Tugwell, cleaned his desk preparatory to leaving tomorrow night for Bismarck, N. Dak., where he will direct the temporary drought-relief setup and begin outlining a permanent program of resettlement for vast areas of the five hardest-hit States.

Milk prices, according to the Associated Press, shot upward in cities near the drought regions, while WPA State Administrator M. A. Kennedy of South Dakota warned of the danger of disease spreading in primary drought counties through use of water hauled from creeks without sanitary precautions.

Estimate Feed Funds.

Joseph L. Dailey and W. W. Alexander, assistant RA administrators, who reported to Tugwell yesterday at the conclusion of their 17-day drought-section tour, said $30,000,000 would be necessary to feed cattle until next season, if there are no rains. With rains, $15,000,000 would be sufficient, they said.

Aubrey Williams, assistant Works Progress administrator, will leave by airplane today for Bismarck, N. Dak., to plot relief work, and will survey the area with Assistant Administrator Howard O. Hunter.

The corn crop remained in a highly dangerous situation, as expected rains failed to materialize, when the 11-day-old heat area defeated attempts of rain-clouds to move into the drought section over the week-end. Without general soaking rains in the next few days, over vast areas, the corn will literally dry up and turn to dust, observers said.

North Dakota began the construction of 23 dams as WPA projects yesterday, looking to a future in which stored water will keep the prairies green without rain.

$350,000,000 Damage.

Observers settled at about $350,000,000 as the sum of the drought's damage thus far, with the possible death of the corn crop likely to shoot this figure far higher.

The news that Tugwell expects to plan a permanent program for the drought area was the first indication that President Roosevelt actually expects to change the economy of these States, as he mentioned at a press conference last week. The President, flatly denouncing rumors that RA meant to depopulate the region, said that the land must be turned to grass, and forested, and that soil-conservation and soil-improvement measures must be taken in the region.

He said that it would then support a considerable population which would not be subject to the recurrent distress of drought, if the proper reclamation and other programs were extended throughout the territory.

Apparently Tugwell, after studying the situation of first hand, will outline a series of recommendations for the President's use when he returns to the White House after August 1, and before he proceeds on his own inspection trip through the sunburned deserts of the Dakotas.

The States now containing primary drought counties on the "drought black list" of 385 stricken counties include the Dakotas, Minnesota, Wyoming, Montana, Kentucky, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia, Iowa and Nebraska.

The two RA administrators, who returned yesterday from a careful survey of conditions, described great areas in which all the homes and farm houses have been abandoned to the dust, the heat and the insect plagues. They said that in nearly every case they had found where a veteran had received his bonus money, the family had promptly emigrated, going in the main to California, although many were departing for the other Pacific Coast States and Idaho, and some had gone to Wisconsin and Michigan.

Dailey said that this seemed to be the rule, emigration the moment a family had a lump sum large enough to permit moving from the drought areas, where crops have in many cases not come up for seven years.

He forecast that on December 1, when the damage of the drought will have touched its height, the peak load of families in six States which will require aid additional to that extended by the WPA will total as follows:

North Dakota, 40,000; South Dakota, 35,000; Nebraska, between 15,000 and 20,000; Kansas, between 15,000 and 20,000; Wyoming, 10,000, and Montana 10,000.

Relief will be handed out in two forms—direct grants, a straight gift of money, and feed loans—money loaned to support farmers' cattle through the winter. The sum of $20 per month will go out in the first form, and a total of $25 per cow per season will be needed by farmers until next spring's forage crop appears.

State RA administrators from North and South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, Wyoming and Minnesota attended conferences with Tugwell today. The Montana director will appear tomorrow.

Dailey said that about two-thirds of the western halves of North and South Dakota should be returned to grass. He said he had heard no single dissenting voice in a series of farmers' meetings there over the proposal of a major resettlement program.

The RA has several grasslands projects in the drought area at present time, the largest being the Milk River project in eastern Montana, of about 1,000,000 acres in extent. These are demonstration projects solely, said Alexander.

The domestic prices for cereals and corn were steady in the Chicago and other markets yesterday, with quotations closing about even with Saturday's wild finish.

Authorities on food cosumption predicted yesterday in Chicago and other centers that the consumer would eventually pay the entire bill for the drought disaster, pointing to the increases, small but steady thus far, in milk and dairy produce prices. A 1-cent jump in Chicago milk prices was expected shortly, as production in the Chicago milk shed has been cut 25 per cent. The price has already gone up in Kansas City, Cincinnati, Akron, St. Louis and other points. Butter prices have advanced in all major markets and are now at the highest level in six years. Vegetables, on the whole, have remained cheap, as yet.

Col. Cooper in U. S.

New York, July 13 (AP).—Col. Hugh L. Cooper, American builder of the world's largest hydro-electric plant, the Dnieperstroy Dam, said on his arrival today from Europe that the Soviet government is planning another immense power plant on the Volga River.

2 From D. C. Visit Canada On Vacation

Goodwin Sons Leave for Desbarats, Will Proceed to Bar Harbor.

Mother Will Join Them After Spending While at Monterey.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

Mr. MacDonald Goodwin and Mr. Morton Goodwin, sons of Judge and Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin, are on their way to Desbarats, Canada, where they will spend two weeks at their summer home, Normac, named for them, and then go to Bar Harbor, Me., to visit Mrs. Henry Dimock at Elsinor during August.

Mrs. Goodwin expects to go to Monterey in the Blue Ridge Mountains for a time and will join her sons at Elsinor the end of the month. Judge Goodwin, who will stay at the Chevy Chase Club for the summer, will spend his weekends with Mrs. Goodwin at Monterey. Among other Washingtonians who are in the Blue Ridge Mountains are Mme. Sze, wife of the Ambassador of China; Mr. and Mrs. William S. Culbertson, whose summer home is Charmion Manor, and Mrs. Marshal Orme Exnicios.

Since their sons came home last month, Judge and Mrs. Goodwin have done much riding with them, a sport they always enjoy together at their estate, Apple Green, in Lake Forest, Ill., where they have their own horses and dogs. They have ridden regularly at Bradley Farms here and also at Belmont, the Leesburg estate of the former Secretary of War and Mrs. Patrick J. Hurley, famous for its historic background and the hospitality of its present owners.

Judge Best Rider.

Mr. MacDonald Goodwin and Mr. Norton Goodwin have ridden there frequently with Miss Patricia Hurley, who is an expert horsewoman. Of the Goodwin family, Judge Goodwin is conceded by his wife and sons to be the best rider, although all of them are thoroughly at home on their horses.

For many years the Goodwins have spent part of every winter season in Washington, and for the last three years have made their home here. Their estate at Lake Forest, which is the center of much entertaining when they are there, is known to many members of diplomatic and official society who have been guests there. Mrs. Goodwin, who is a lover of animals, has fine dogs and horses at Apple Green, and among them two Rhodesian ridge-backed lion dogs, given her by Lady Murial Padget.

The dogs are the only ones of their breed in America. They were taken to England from South Africa by Lady Padget's brother, the Earl of Winchelshe, and were given to Mrs. Goodwin three years ago by Lady Padget, whom she had been visiting for two months at Cranmore, Devonshire. They are powerful, trained to attack lions, and are distinguished by a mane down the middle of their backs, which bristles when they are excited. They are gentle dogs as pets.

Artist, Musician, Writer.

Mrs. Goodwin not only loves the out of doors, riding, tramping through the woods and swimming, but also is an artist, a musician and a writer. She follows the arts as a hobby. Those who know her best look forward to the letters and notes she writes, illustrated in the margin by gay little sketches, full of animation and humor. Her invitations are often decorated with appropriate pen sketches or etchings and sometimes place cards also have her drawings on them.

She is a person of originality with a love of life and of people. When she was designated to lead with Gen. Albert Cox and Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen of the District the parade to the Griffith Stadium a few weeks ago for the rally in connection with the broadcast of President Roosevelt's acceptance speech, she insisted on having a white horse. She rode the two miles sitting side saddle on her white mount, presenting a striking picture in a black habit with her red hair showing from under her black hat. She swims almost daily at the Chevy Chase Club.

Club Is Scene For Parties On Patuxent

Members Hold Fetes During the Summer Season.

President Roosevelt Is Honorary Member of Lodge.

By Dudley Harmon.

Although the shooting season in Maryland does not open until September, the Patuxent Gun Club is the scene of many informal dinner parties during the summer months. Last week-end several members and their guests gathered at the clubhouse, located on the Patuxent River near Marlboro, Md., for supper and an evening of canoeing.

The late Mr. Truxton Beale and his brother, Mr. Buckingham Beale, were among the original group which founded the club almost 50 years ago, according to Mr. John Newbold, one of the members. In those days, it took a good deal of energy and no little perseverance to reach the shooting grounds, as there were no roads leading directly to it, and members had to go there from Upper Marlboro by horse and buggy.

"President Roosevelt used to come here frequently when he was Assistant Secretary of the Navy," said Mr. Newbold, "but he has not done any shooting here lately, although he is an honorary member."

Membership in the club is limited to 30—all men. In the old days, members shot ducks, but now that the river bank has become more populated, the ducks have almost completely disappeared, and ortolans supply the chief game. The ortolan, or reed bird, is a bobolink, and is to be found in great numbers in the marshes in the Patuxent River.

The Metropolitan Museum in New York offered the club $10,000 for the old French wallpaper on the dining-room walls. It depicts rustic scenes in France and nobody has yet offered a satisfactory explanation as to how it found its way to the simple Maryland farmhouse, which has been remodeled to make the headquarters of the club, but there it was when members took the property over.

The wall of one room is entirely lined with maps from the National Geological Survey and the National Geographic Society. The barroom ceiling is covered with labels from wine and liquor bottles, and visitors who have craned their necks and examined them carefully declare there are no two alike.

Among the distinguished members of the club are Mr. Larz Anderson; the former Ambassador to, Argentina, Mr. Robert Woods Bliss; Col. Edwin Watson and Capt. Paul Bastedo, aids to the President; Mr. John F. Wilkins, Mr. Henry Spencer, Mr. Horace Westcott, president of the club; Mr. Walter Bruce Howe, Mr. Alexander Hagner, Representative Robert Bacon, of New York, and Lieut. Comdr. Jerauld Wright. The latter two, together with Mr. Newbold, are rated as being among the best shots at the club.

Mrs. J. S. Bennett To Entertain 200

Mrs. John S. Bennett will entertain 200 prominent women of Baltimore, Washington, Montgomery County and Alexandria at dinner Saturday evening at Camp Bennett, Md., of which she is the founder and director.

It is the summer unit of the Children's Emergency Home, and her guests are women prominently identified with the progress of her project. She opened the camp three years ago and since then more than 2,000 under-privileged children have been given vacations there. In groups of 88, they are selected every two weeks until late in September.

Assisting Mrs. Bennett will be Miss Ella Werner, Miss Gene Bearmore and Dr. Elizabeth Sohon, of Washington; Mrs. Dorothy Klemm Warren and Mrs. Edith Reinhardt, of Baltimore; Miss Helen Shaffer and Mrs. Lucille Miller, of Montgomery County, Md., and Mrs. Mae Bowman, of Alexandria, Va.

By Mrs. Belloc Lowndes

CHAPTER 33.

TO HER LEFT was the front door, before her, the first few stone steps of the winding stairway which led up to her bedroom, and, to her right, the entrance to the great hall. She felt certain Philip Trefane was now waiting for her, maybe rather anxiously, to learn what had been the reason for that telephone call from America. Already trouble was overwhelming American financial interests, and the Trefanes, by remarks she had heard them both make, were aware things were going ill in Wall street. She knew Iris well enough to feel certain Philip had been told of that call from New York.

Ruth would have given much to go upstairs, just to be by herself for a while, to try and adjust herself to the awful change the news she had just heard must make in her life. But she was a brave girl, and she felt it would be best to get over what she knew would be an excruciatingly painful moment.

So she opened the door to her right. As she did so Philip Trefane jumped up from the chair on which he had been sitting and she saw at once that she had gussed right, for there was a look of anxiety and of questioning on his face.

Breaks the News.

For a moment they looked at one another in silence. Then he said rather roughly: "What's the matter? Have you had bad news?"

She opened her mouth, and found she could not speak. Her throat was as if constricted.

"Has something gone wrong with your money?" he asked in a hard voice. She bent her head.

There flitted over Philip's face a curious expression, and as she looked at him, she remembered that he had looked at her like that when they were both in the water, he seized with deadly cramp, and she in danger of drowning, crying out to him to save her.

But that terrifying grin faded quickly, and walking toward her he exclaimed: "I say, Ruth. Quite apart from myself, I'm damned sorry—for you were such a good sport!"

She heard him with a sensation of relief. Yet even as her brain registered what he had just said, she knew that it proved that to this man with her money gone she, Ruth Starling, could no longer count as a good sport.

Still, he actually took her cold hand as he went on: "I'm awfully sorry for you, my dear girl. I mean quite apart from what this means to me. Come over here, and sit down; for you look as though you'd had a knockout blow." He forced her down into a chair, and then: "Wait a mo,' and I'll get you a spot of brandy."

She shook her head, and he said: "Then let me get you a glass of water?"

She tried to smile, as she shook her head again.

Iris Is Alarmed.

He walked across to the door which led into the sitting room and, opening it, called out, "Iris?"

She came into the hall and looking from the one to the other, exclaimed: "Good heavens! What's the matter? You two haven't had a scrap?"

She put the question lightly, yet she felt frightened, for they both looked so much unlike themselves.

"Ruth is the matter, darling. She's just had a telephone call from America saying all her money's gone phut. She had left it all in a blasted bank, and the bank has shut up shop. You know what England thinks of American banking methods."

He allowed something of what he was feeling to escape in that rude question.

Then he cried: "I say! Steady now!" and rushing forward, he caught hold of Iris. Her willowy figure had begun swaying, and had he not held her up she would have fallen.

Still holding her, he brought her over close to Ruth, and gently lowered her into a chair. Then he stood looking down at them both—the girl he disliked, and the woman he loved. His poor precious Iris—how he longed to reassure her—but he did not dare say even one cryptic word of consolation.

His crafty, agile brain was working hard, wondering how this utterly unexpected news might affect certain secret arrangements he had made.

Have You Enjoyed a Hot Dinner Lately?

If this picture of pot roasted rib roast and pan browned vegetables gives you a heat wave, read the accompanying story which explains fully the advantages of an occasional hot meal during the torrid days that wreck havoc with your appetite.

Hot Meal Best For Restoring Worn Appetite

Pot Roasts Can Be Made to Take Less Time Than Cold Dishes.

By Dorothea Duncan.

EVERYONE SHUDDERS when hot food is mentioned. It is just like another heat wave descending upon the heads of the hapless victims of the worst Washington summer in six years. But the truth of the matter is that after an overdose of chilly beverages, cold cuts and potato salad, the only thing that will really pick up a lagging appetite is a hot meal. It may take renewed courage to taste the first mouthful, but once accomplished a better dinner will be consumed, and a better disposition and happier physical reaction will be the result.

The housewife has to be considered as well as the rest of the family when summer meals are suggested, for to her falls the lot of preparing the meal, standing over a hot stove, etc. But there are many hot dishes that take less kitchen time than an equal number of cold foods. And pot roasts are included in this group of hot suggestions for summer dinners.

Pot roasts may be cooked gently on top of the stove. Lighting the oven is never considered. Not only the meat, but the required vegetables, as well, can be cooked in the same pot at the same time and with the same heat from one burner. This type of dinner needs no watching. Once the cover is clapped on the pan and the flame lighted the housewife can leave the kitchen until the clock tells her that her dinner is cooked.

The less expensive, tougher meats are usually cooked via the pot on top of the stove, but a rolled and boned rib roast, a small roast of veal or pork, a boned shoulder or leg of lamb of medium size—all these may also be cooked in a large, heavy covered pot on top of the stove.

The hot meat will certainly give an edge to your heat-worn appetite, and if you haven't tasted pan-roasted carrots, onions and potatoes since the first of June, you will enjoy their appearance and flavor more than you can imagine.

It is wise to cook a pot roast that is large enough for two meals. This will limit the time spent in the kitchen the following day. The meat can be served sliced cold with or without the addition of hot gravy. Hot vegetables, green ones this time, rather than the root variety served the previous day, will afford a pleasant change.

A hot main course will make a chilled consomme, a crisp salad and a frozen dessert doubly enjoyable. Today's menu suggests just such a dinner and includes a recipe for a delicious four fruit sherbet.

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

"I THINK a bathroom is usually the dullest-looking room," remarked a lady who adores to paint up the place.

"I don't know that I ever saw or heard of a bathroom with walls painted scarlet, but I don't know why I can't have a scarlet bathroom if I want one," she mused. "The fixtures and the floors are white, and maybe I'll have the woodwork and the medicine cabinet white. White curtains at the window and on the shower, but a scarlet bath mat. Towels mostly of white but with some in a very pale powder blue. I'll use flat paint for the whole business, the washable kind. Does it sound too weird to you?"

"Not at all," we replied. "But then don't take our word for it. We always like bigger and brighter colors. Perhaps because we came of age in the era of the taupes and beiges and are still reacting against them. Although we must say even taupes and beiges can be stunning in the right places.

Send a stamp for Miss Boykin's bulletin, "How to Make a Silk Lamp Shade." It is four pages long and includes complete instructions for making a shade that would be quite expensive to buy.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Married Woman Tells of Love Triangle Which, if Not Soon Solved, May Wreck Her Health.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been suffering and worrying over a problem for two years. I feel I will soon lose my health and all prospects of future happiness if conditions do not change soon. Over a year ago I left my husband and recently divorced him. I have seen him twice since June of 1935. He was up this way on business the first time and I took our 12-year-old son to see him. He was very indifferent toward me then, but when we met again a few weeks ago he seemed anxious to start all over. Yet his letters are still somewhat indifferent.

After I met "John," who is my ideal in every way, I felt I could find happiness with him; so being of a very conscientious nature I told my husband of this love. I didn't want to break up our home and felt my husband would understand. I left thinking everything would work itself out someway. I hesitated, too, because of "John's" financial status. A few months ago, he left feeling I would never be free and giving me the chance to drop him if I chose; also feeling my husband would continue making me suffer as long as he could hold me.

"John" has been trying to find work and writes me he is sure he will have something within the next month. Now I must wait until September at least because of an operation on my son. I feel that both of us are becoming weary of it all. I become frantic when I think I may lose "John," yet my heart is breaking over hurting my husband. Public opinion means much to me also. It has been hard to write just what I mean to convey to you, Miss Haworth. If it is possible, I would appreciate an interview. CONSCIENTIOUS.

A Baffling Plot.

DEAR CONSCIENTIOUS: Yours is as ambiguous a letter as I have received during the time I have been conducting this column. For instance, your statement that, while married, you met a man with whom you felt you could find perfect happiness; so, bein of a conscientious nature and not wanting to break up your home, you told your husband all about it, thinking he would understand and that things would work themselves out someway! Now, there's a picture my imagination—strain it as I will—simply fails to take in.

• • • •

How, in heaven's name, did you expect to find perfect happiness with a man other than your husband without breaking up your home? I'm sure I don't know what this is all about, but if your husband is willing to take you back (I seem to gather that much, at least) my advice to you is to go back to him, for the sake of your 12-year-old son, and forget about "John." "John" would have to be something of a superman to make you happy if he hasn't got a job, if his financial status is wobbly, and if his chances of securing a job are none too bright.

• • • •

There are certain married women of immature intellect—maybe you are one of them—who are never satisfied to let well enough alone; who must always be chasing rainbows in the form of illusory romance on the horizon outside their domestic circle; who drive perfectly good husbands distracted with their silly dramatics staged in the name of love, and who think nothing of offering up their children as helpless sacrifices on the altar of their own sickening, irresponsible selfishness.

• • • •

When a woman tells of being frantic at the thought of losing her extra-marital suitor's love, and in the same breath tells of her heartbreak over hurting her husband by leaving him for the other man, I feel like saying: "Nuts." When mature persons do things for good and sufficient reasons, they can usually afford to lay aside sentimentalizing and attitudinizing. And when we find persons sentimentalizing and attitudinizing there's usually very little sound reason or logic underlying their actions.

• • • •

Pull yourself together, my good woman, and act your age. If I have failed altogether to grasp the fundamental problem as it exists here—or in your own mind—please telephone me and we shall make an appointment for a personal interview. Perhaps in a face-to-face talk we can get down to cases and find out what this is all about. For I reiterate, it has me completely baffled. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Tapioca This Week's Theme In The Post's Recipe Contest

TAPIOCA HAS EARNED a permanent place on every pantry shelf. Housewives refuse to be without it, for it is a priceless ingredient not only as the basis for interesting and nourishing desserts but is applied as the ideal thickening agent for chilled meat stock or fruit soups, for fruit and berry pies, meat loaf, etc., as well.

Because tapioca has assumed such an important place in culinary achievements it has been chosen as the theme for The Post's current recipe contest. This week Dorothea Duncan, home economics editor of The Post, is asking for your favorite recipe in which the success of the recipe depends upon tapioca as an ingredient. Send your recipe to her in care of The Washington Post, and be sure to mail it in time to reach this office by Saturday.

Cash awards will be offered for the five best recipes submitted. The first prize will be $5, the second $3 and the three remaining prizes $1 each.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Are You Puffy?

The billions of cells in the human body cannot work except in the presence of water, but too much fluid is as dangerous as too little. Whenever the tissues become engorged, therefore, we associate the phenomenon with disease.

More than 100 years ago Richard Bright suggested that kidney disease (Bright's disease) was one of the causes of swelling. In hives (urticaria) it is probable that the capillaries become stretched (dilated) beyond their capacity to hold the fluid elements of the blood. The result is a local puffing of the skin. If the walls of the capillaries lose their normal tone—in other words, become more porous—the liquid part of the blood may leave the vessels.

This is what happens in acute disease of the kidneys and, as a result, we find albumin in the urine.

Weakness of Heart.

The most common type, however, is associated with heart failure—weakness of the heart muscle. By this we mean that the heart is not carrying on its normal labors in the usual manner. The difficulties lies in the fact that the blood does not return from the extremities with its aforetime rapidity and force, and hence fluid escapes into the tissues of the lower portions of the body. Sometimes confining the patient to bed will be followed by complete disappearance of the symptoms, as rest will permit the heart to recover.

Some individuals may note that the size of the ankles will increase toward the end of a day of activity. After a good night's rest this sign will have disappeared wholly. Should the patient show a slight rise in blood pressure, physicians are likely to fall into the error of prescribing too little animal protein in the diet. A type of starvation is thus established which insures a continuance of the edema.

Some years ago an eminent physician placed his heart cases on a diet of 1½ to 2 quarts of milk daily for three or four days, no other food being allowed. While occasionally striking results followed, it was found that the nutrition requirements were decidedly substandard. If to this regime is added an ounce of unsalted butter and from two to three ounces of unsalted crackers or bread, the total calories are equal to a little more than 1,000 and will be sufficient to maintain strength with the patient at rest in bed.

Includes Bed Rest.

The plan for the relief of too much water in the tissues when it is due to heart failure includes bed rest with a diet which contains little or no salt, with a limited intake of fluid, and enough protein. Vegetable protein—while of value—cannot replace that of animal origin. If food tastes too flat, potassium or ammonium chloride may be substituted. After a time, however, patients will become accustomed to the salt-free diet and their general improvement will insure its continuance.

More Varied Child Training Modern Trend

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

MRS. JONES had no theories about equal rights for men and women, but she was concerned in their having equal chances. In training her youngsters she saw to it that boys and girls alike learned the rudiments of self-help. The boys were taught a certain amount of plain sewing and cooking, and the girls were trained to use garden and carpenter's tools.

Many mothers are averse to teaching their boys how to cook or sew lest they make them effeminate. No doubt they themselves have more than once wished that their husbands knew a little about food and its preparation, or could at a pinch sew on a button. But they continue training their sons to follow the tradition that a boy is not supposed to dabble in household arts.

The reason for not teaching girls to use such tools as planes, saws, picks and shovels is harder to fathom. It is seldom considered part of a girl's training.

There is no need to teach a boy to make clothes, sew a fine seam, or bake a cake, nor to make an expert carpenter of a girl. But today when boys and girls alike look forward to independent lives whether they marry or not, it does seem as if they might be freed from the trammels of an outworn convention. Every boy should be able to take care of himself in any emergency—to cook a simple meal, darn his own socks and sew on a button. Every girl should have the ability to drive nails, sink screws, saw across a board, put a tire on her car, or dig herself out of a snowdrift.

Even in the mechanical world we live in, no machinery has been invented, and it is to be hoped none ever will be invented, for doing these homely chores.

Men Average $16 For Beauty Aids; Women $22 a Year

Chicago, (U.P.).—The American man spends only about two-thirds the amount women do for "beauty aids," according to the results of a national survey announced here.

While women are paying nearly $800,000,000 annually to beauty shops and for cosmetics, men are spending about $600,000,000 a year in barber shops and for shaving lotions, hair tonic, massages and manicures.

The nation's annual barber shop bill is reported to have dropped from $750,000,000 in 1926 to approximately $500,000,000 in 1936, yet the masculine use of other items to enhance the appearance of the face and hair has increased about 25 per cent.

On the basis of the 1930 census, $16.21 a year is spent by the adult male for "beauty aids," as compared with the estimated $22.28 for women.

One-Man Car Wins Praise At Session

Transit Officials From Out-of-Town Indorse Transit Proposal.

Clayton Fails in Effort to Postpone Hearing of Commission.

The one-man street car, object of widespread distaste in Washington, was praised yesterday by out-of-town transit men who appeared before the local Public Utilities Commission.

They were "company witnesses," brought here by the Capital Transit Co. to back up its efforts to add to the number of one-man cars here. The company has asked the P. U. C. for permission to convert 20 new stream-lined cars to one-man operation and to use 20 other reconditioned one-man cars recently purchased in Providence, R. I.

The out-of-town transit officials testified that one-man cars are just as fast as the two-man cars; that they have reduced accidents; that they are much more economical, but that they have caused no hardship among the personnel, since the normal turnover takes care of the shrinkage in man-power.

88 Per Cent in Boston.

Edward Dana, vice president of the Boston Elevated Railway, said 88 per cent of his company's surface cars are of the one-man type. Ten thousand men were employed by his company in 1919, he said, when it began to install one-man cars. Last year, he said, the number had been cut to 6,200. He emphasized, however, that there had been no lay-offs.

Last year, Dana said, the accident rate for one-man street cars was 124 for every 1,000,000 miles traveled. In the same period, he said, the accident rate for cars manned by a motorman and a conductor was 228 for every 1,000,000 miles.

"To return to the two-man cars," Dana said, "would cost our company $1,900,000 a year."

Saved Firm $400,000.

J. R. Ong, director of research of the Cincinnati Street Railway Co., told the commission that 51.7 per cent of his company's cars are of the one-man type. These cars, he said, saved the company $400,000 last year.

The accident rate, Ong said, has fallen sharply since the company began installing the cars.

E. Dow Gilman, director of public utilities for Cincinnati, sketched the history of the one-man car in Cincinnati and said:

"I cannot understand the objection to the one-man cars when there is no objection to one-man operation of buses. The bus driver does everything, plus steering the bus through traffic."

The presence of a second man on street cars, he said, never served to reduce accidents.

F. G. Duffe, vice president of the Kansas City Public Service Co., said that 100 per cent of his company's cars are of the one-man type. He said that there had been no particular objection to the cars on the part of the public.

Thomas Fitzgerald, vice president and general manager of the Pittsburgh Railways Co., said one-man cars had saved his company from bankruptcy.

In 1932-33-34, he said, his company had been cited for a national safety award, and he pointed out that accidents have decreased as the company has increased the number of its one-man cars.

Witnesses for the Capital Transit Co. will continue testifying today, and tomorrow William A. Roberts, people's counsel, will begin calling Washington citizens opposed to one-man cars.

Seeks to Halt Hearing.

At the outset yesterday, William McK. Clayton, chairman of the Public Utilities committee of the Federatoin of Citizens Associations, sought to halt the hearing.

He called attention to a law enacted in 1892 when horse cars were the vogue. This, he pointed out, provided that each car be manned by a conductor as well as a driver. "The law was enacted before the Public Utilities Commission was created," said Clayton, "but it is still a law. If it applied to one-man cars in the horse-car day, it certainly applies now."

Clayton moved that the Capital Transit's petition for permission to add to its number of one-man cars be dismissed. Richmond B. Keech, the only member of the Public Utilities Commission at the hearing, said he would take the motion under advisement.

Chairman Is Ill.

Riley E. Elgen, chairman of the P. U. C., is ill and Commissioner Dan I. Sultan, the other member, is out of town on official business.

Clayton moved for postponement of the hearing until their return, but Keech ruled that under the law he had authority to proceed in their absence.

Keech overruled a motion by Clayton to have the North American Co., owners of the Capital Transit Co., a party to the hearing and to have the hearing postponed until the properties of the company have been evaluated by the P. U. C.

McNeil Loses Appeal; Must Serve in Prison

U. S. Tribunal Upholds Conviction in Park Bank Embezzlement Case.

Benedict McNeil, former assistant cashier of the defunct Park Savings Bank, will have to serve a sentence of from eight months to four years on charges of conspiring to embezzle the funds of the bank, the United States Court of Appeals held yesterday in an opinion by Justice D. Lawrence Groner. The affirmation of McNeil's conviction in the District Court was unanimous.

Indicted with his father, Alexander McNeil, who died before the case could be tried, and with Robert Stunz, executive officer of the bank, who committed suicide after bank examiners had refused to permit reopening of the institution in March, 1933, the younger McNeil was found guilty in November, 1935.

He appealed the verdict, citing 68 errors of omission and commission during his trial. The Appellate Court grouped these in four classes

Cites Refusal.

They were: "Those relating to the admission and exclusion of evidence; refusal of the trial court to require John J. Wilson, the prosecutor, to elect between the charges of grand larceny and embezzlement; refusal of the court to direct a not guilty verdict; and lastly, the granting of certain instructions for the jurors and the exclusion of others."

Pointing out that the Government relied mainly upon the testimony of Eugene Sauer, an expert accountant of the Department of Justice, the Appellate Court demonstrated that Sauer had taken his data from the official books of the bank. Upon the facts he found there, the court said he was entitled to express an opinion as an expert witness.

Groner Opinion.

In his opinion, Justice Groner said that "Appellant (McNeil) took the stand in his own defense and the jury had the opportunity of hearing his explanations of the transactions which formed the basis of the Government's charge. His general defense was that he did what Stunz told him to do: That if Stunz directed him to make out a debit ticket to Robert Smith for $10,000, he would do it and ask no questions; and apparently this was true of the other employes of the bank who were not charged with any complicity in the general looting for which Stunz unquestionably is primarily responsible. But in the instances in which the Government charged wrong-doing against appellant—if there was any wrong-doing—he and his father were beneficiaries, and this made the difference. That the manner of handling the account was extraordinary is not denied."

Stunz, according to the Appellate Court, embezzled, or stole more than $2,000,000 from the bank and left a note in his desk stating that "no one now connected with the bank was responsible for any irregularities. I, and I alone, was to blame."

The Park Bank was closed with a shortage approximating $4,500,000, some of which was caused through "bad loans" and the rest of which was traced to Stunz and others employed in the bank.

Hundreds Dance to WPA Tunes, But an Irish Heart Is Broken

Sailor Meets a Girl in the Crowd Outdoors; They Trip Through the Numbers, but Never Hear 'When Irish Eyes Are Smilin'.'

The WPA probably doesn't know—and probably never will—but it broke the heart of an Irish lad last night.

Nobody knows exactly how he got there—this strange young man from a strange old land. And nobody knows where he went.

That he went last night to the Ellipse and danced a jig in the street with a beautiful girl and he left with a lonesome look in his Irish eyes.

A WPA orchestra strummed out dance tunes at Ellipse road and Sixteenth street last night—from 9 to 11. It was the first of such outdoor dances in Washington. The Government is furnishing the music for its people because it thinks its people need music for gayety and happiness. Seven hundred swayed last night to the dance tunes at the Ellipse and the whole affair apparently was a big success—except for him.

Wears Sailor's Dungarees.

He wore a sailor's cap and dungaree. The sailor's cap was tilted on his head and the dungaree could have been laundered.

He stood on the fringe of the crowd at first and watched. It was like Ireland, after all. Like Ireland of folk songs and dances in the square. His feet beat a rhythm against the sidewalk and his Irish heart pounded to the tunes. It was like Ireland.

And he couldn't resist.

She was a beautiful girl. Nobody knows exactly where she came from ethier. She was typically American. Her parents could have sailed the ocean in the days before the Revolution and been early colonists of America.

He Asks Her to Dance.

He asked her to dance.

They danced.

The orchestra played:

"Goody, Goody."

"Swing Mr. Charlie."

"Christopher Columbus."

"Is It True What They Say Say About Dixie?"

It wasn't very much like:

"When Irish Eyes Are Smilin'."

But music is music wherever you go. He didn't know how to dance very well. Not the American way. But there was rhythm in his heart and a patter in his heels.

They got along.

The orchestra played 28 numbers and he talked to her all the time.

Nobody knows exactly what they said. But you could look at their eyes.

Thought It Was Swell.

Everybody thought it was swell—the Government giving them "Stardust" and "All My Life" and "You Can't Pull the Wool Over My Eyes."

It is doubtful if he knew that the Government was sponsoring all of the music. He came from a spontaneous land where people sing and dance—well, just to sing and dance—and where they don't need a government to promote it. It's free—Irish songs and Irish dances.

They played the last number. It was a long number.

Her mother stood on the edge of the crowd and beckoned to her when all was through. She walked over to her mother and looked back all the time. He just stood there.

Everybody was leaving.

Somebody asked him where he was from.

He said:

"Ireland," but he wasn't thinking what he was saying. He just stood there and watched her leave.

The WPA said it was a successful dance and that they expected good crowds every time they played. They will play once or twice a week—to promote an American folk dance all its own.

Southeast to Seek $750,000 for Span

A special committee from the Southeast Business Men's Association will call on the District Commissioners to ask an appropriation in the 1938 budget of $750,000 for the replacement of the Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge, members decided in a meeting last night.

The committee probably will visit the District Building tomorrow, but the time of the visit has not been decided upon. It includes Richard English, chairman; Alexander Berlin, Arthur Shaffer and Lewis Frick.

A petition bearing 400 names of residents and business men protecting the one-way status of Eleventh street southeast, was read to the members, who are seeking to have it thrown open again to two-way traffic.

The association decided to have its annual outing at Chapel Point, July 29.

Ex-Marine Will Get Navy Hero's Medal

J. Harold Arnould, of 2127 California street northwest, formerly with the HOLC, will be awarded the Navy Cross today for gallantry in action with the Marine Corps in the Dominican Republic in 1916.

The award, which was authorized by act of Congress, will be made at the 5 o'clock parade at the Marine Barracks here in this city by Lieut. Col. Francis T. Evans.

Arnould served as a drummer of the Thirty-first company of the Fourth Regiment of the Marines in the Dominican Republic. During a skirmish with bandits, when the pistol of his commanding officer jammed, Arnould leaped in front and opened fire with his rifle.

Civil Service Announces Rules Change

Nonmerit System Clerks to Be 'Blanketed' Into Roster.

Fitness Tests Are Set Up on President Roosevelt's Order.

New rules for "blanketing" into civil service employes from agencies not under the merit system were established yesterday by the Civil Service Commission.

Fitness tests which such persons must pass were set up by the commission on order of President Roosevelt.

The new rules would not apply to any emergency units at present, but should some of these agencies be transferred to the civil service system later, each employe would have to pass these qualifications:

He must have been appointed at least 60 days before the change.

"He must be "unqualifiedly recommended" to the Civil Service Commission by the head of his agency.

He must "pass such appropriate non-competitive tests of fitness as the Civil Service Commission may proscribe."

It is provided by a fourth rule that any statutory or regulatory restriction, such as requiring American citizenship, which applies to those taking regular civil service examination, also must apply to those blanketed in."

The commission commented on the rules as follows:

"It is believed that the rule will definitely correct certain weaknesses from the standpoint of broad governmental policy which previously existed for more than 30 years under the former rule."

Miller Sentenced In Extortion Case, Hints Trial Unfair

Jesse J. Miller, youthful farm hand of Thurmont, Md., yesterday was sentenced to serve a prison term of from three to five years by Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue, in District Court.

He was convicted last week of a charge of sending a letter to Mrs. Stephen McK. Farrand, 6011 Gates road, Chevy Chase, Md., threatening harm to her 14-months-old child unless he was paid $5,000.

Justice O'Donoghue asked Miller if he had anything to say before being sentenced.

"I have plenty to say," the boy responded.

"What is it?" Justice O'Donoghue queried.

"I didn't get my rights," he answered.

"What rights do you want?" he was asked, and when he shook his head, indicating he would say no more, sentence was imposed.

District K. of C. Ball Tomorrow

District Knights of Columbus will give their first inaugural ball at the Indian Spring Country Club tomorrow at 10 p. m.

The affair is to be held in honor of the newly elected State deputy, Walter I. Plant. Co-chairmen of the committee are Francis A. McCann and James P. McKeon.

Others on the committee include Robert F. Handley, tickets; James F. Kehoe, reception; Ted Moseley, entertainment; Joseph Degnan, door, and more than 100 members of the order representing the five local councils.

4 Escape as Boat Catches Fire Here

Four persons, three of whom are unidentified, narrowly escaped drowning or injury yesterday when a motor boat burst into flames in the Anacostia River near the Eleventh street bridge.

Witnesses said the four passengers donned life preservers and leaped overboard when the boat caught fire. The blaze apparently was started by a backfire from the motor.

William H. Neitzey, employe of the Eastern Power Boat Club, picked up the people in a rowboat.

Flames on the boat were extinguished before they reached the gasoline supply.

Employes of Dean's Boathouse, where the boat was kept, said William R. Joseph, 712 A street southeast, owned the boat and that he was one of the passengers rescued.

Permits Are Lost By Nine Speeders

Nine driving permits were revoked yesterday after the Revocations Board acted on the cases of the motorists convicted of exceeding 50 miles an hour.

Those who lost their licenses were Leslie R. Anderson, 10 Fourth street northeast, 55 miles; Lawrence J. Auth, 108 East Clifton terrace northwest, 70 miles; Reardon D. Goode, 1006 C street southwest, 55 miles; Wallace P. Hellens, 920 M street northwest, 60 miles; John E. Hetch, 3403 Rodman street northwest, 55 miles; James R. Holsonbake, 2910 Twelfth street northeast, 52 miles; Adolphus Horne, 905 Forty-fifth place northeast, 50 miles; Paul J. Two Boys Wearing Polo Shirts Barred by Library of Congress Against Rules, Even on Hottest Days, Points Out Superintendent; Father of One Youth Cites Feminine Beach Costumes.

A pair of bright blue polo shirts, of the short-sleeve, open-neck variety, yesterday proved a barrier when two Washington youths sought to enter the Library of Congress.

The boys—Bynum E. Hinton, jr., 16, of 3825 Ingomar street northwest, and Bailey Winder, 15, of 3908 Cedar parkway, Chevy Chase Circle—wanted to learn all they could about the German cruiser Emden, which established such a daring record during the World War.

They wanted to be comfortable, too, and escape the humidity and sultriness as much as possible.

"It's Against the Rules."

So they went to the Library as though clad for polo.

"You can't come in here, fellows," said the blue-uniformed guard. "It's against the rules."

Young Hinton and Winder, both of whom are students at the St. Alban's School for Boys, thought things over, and then Hinton called his father, attorney with offices in the Munsey Building.

The elder Hinton called Martin Roberts, superintendent of the reading rooms.

Roberts explained it was against the rules for such costumes, even on the hottest days. The Library, he pointed out, is a place of dignity. He added that numerous feminine students poring over books and magazines were embarrassed and complained of such attire.

They Made Him Blush.

"I have just returned from the beach," laughed the elder Hinton. "Some of the costumes I saw there made me blush when I was by myself."

He added:

"I come from the cornfields, where the measure of a man is what he is, and not what he wears."

Hinton and Winder, however, said the guard was very polite and they saw his point of view.

"We'll go back and find out all about the Emden today," said young Hinton.

"And we'll wear coats and shirts with neckties and gloves, if necessary."

Gadgets Dress OldLocomotive For Fast Travel

Engine Now Minus Ancient Cow-Catcher and Has Streamlined Body.

The locomotive on exhibit at Union Station yesterday looked like a picture of the giant machines that dreamers say will plow around the earth in the twenty-fifth century.

The machine really was 16 years old.

But at the same time it is the newest thing in steam locomotion.

The engine was completed after a year of work. Her hull was changed. Her ancient cowcatcher was removed and a sleek new front put on. A mechanical fireman—a device that shovels coal all by itself—was installed.

The streamlining cuts down wind resistance and increases speed and reduces cost of operation. The mechanical fireman makes an even fire and the new smoke funnel is for cleanliness.

The name of the new locomotive is Number 3768 and it will be used on an east-west run. There will be none of the new locomotives around Washington because Washington and all points north have electric engines, which aren't even fair competition for the belching steam ones.

Speed of the new engines is set at 80 miles an hour maximum. It can be operated anywhere on the railroad. It is said to be an improvement over anything the Pennsylvania has in operation today—except electric trains.

If the new locomotive fulfills expectations, more will be placed in operation on lines which are not electrified. Photo on picture page.

Contest Extended For Safe Drivers

Closing date for entries in the American Automobile Association's contest to select the representative safe driver in each of the 48 States and the District of Columbia has been extended to July 22, the organization announced yesterday.

The contest originally was to close July 15, but due to a high degree of interest over the Nation and an unabated flood of entries, the time limit was extended.

"The entries to date," Thomas P. Henry of Detroit, president of the organization, said, "indicate not only that this unique safety contest has caught the public eye, but also that individual motorists everywhere are proud of their driving records."

Personal Tax Rule of D. C. Is Sustained

Court Upholds Right to Collect Levies on Intangibles.

William Cogger Loses in Protest Charging Discrimination.

Efforts to force suspected persons to declare personal property intangibles were bolstered in the United States Court of Appeals yesterday when that court sustained the right of the city to levy and collect an intangible personal property tax.

The opinion was handed down in a suit brought by William Cogger, an attorney, who declared the tax was discriminatory in that it failed to tax all persons equally. He made the point that high Government officers and persons owning stock in out-of-town corporations were exempted from the tax.

The Commissioners began the action when they filed a writ seeking to compel Cogger to file a return for two fiscal years. He countered with the charge the tax was illegal because it was discriminatory. The argument was also advanced that the tax act enabling the collection was an unlawful delegation of legislative power.

Through E. Barrett Prettyman, former corporation counsel, and Vernon E. West, the District replied that Cogger could not raise the issue of an unlawful tax until he had paid it under protest, a step it was contended he had not taken.

With this view of the case the Appellate Court agreed, since the report required by the Commissioners was merely a listing of property on which a tax could be levied.

Hazen Asks Employes To Pay Chest Pledges

The Community Chest yesterday asked Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen to appeal to District employes to make good on their pledges of money. Of the amount pledged by the District workers, about $15,000 has not been sent in.

Hazen prepared a memorandum to be sent to all department heads, urging that the workers redeem their pledges and thus help wipe out a deficit of $150,000 in the Community Chest.

Observers Are Fearful About Garbo's Future

It Is Recalled That Others Before Her Have Faded When Legends Died.

By the United Press.

Hollywood, July 13.—It may surprise you that a sizeable section of Hollywood believes Greta Garbo has tumbled into the pitfall that swallowed Theda Bara and Clara Bow.

Bara and Bow faded with the crumbling of their legends, carefully built by publicity, and those who feel Garbo is treading thin ice base the opinion on the supposition she has abandoned the role of the "Swedish Sphinx," the strangely exclusive "mystery woman."

Actually, Garbo's "capitulation to public curiosity" isn't well established. She made no attempt to slip in Hollywood's back door by the sea route on her arrival several weeks ago, but rolled in prosaically aboard a train. She was reasonably cordial (for her) to reporters, and subsequently granted an interview to a fan magazine.

Whether that is the prelude to an abandonment of the "Sphinx" billings remains to be seen. Certainly a chatty, unreticent Garbo would be the strangest sight these parts could conjure.

Others Have Faded Out.

Renown of the slinky, sloe-eyed Bara was a great, if not greater, than Garbo's in the days when she was making "The Vampire" a household word. So seriously was Bara taken as a feminine menace that housewives wrote threatening letters, and women's clubs passed votes of censure against her, and along about 1924 it began to get on the nerves of the amiable person who was the real actress.

She set about to destroy the legend deliberately, having neighbor children in to tea when the press called, and being photographed in simple domestic surroundings. The ladies of the land stopped shooting, but the public lost interest in vampires, and the great Bara vogue waned.

When Clara Bow was at her torrid top she was America's "it" girl, the flaming flapper of the period, personified. Her popularity was tremendous, until at length producers decided to remodel her as a sweet, gentle creature, full of kindly impulses. Winfield Sheehan is usually credited with the idea.

Unfortunately, it failed to register with the public, and Bow never recovered the peak.

Another "Bathing Beauty."

Ending breathless suspense, Cecil B. De Mille, movie maestro of the plumbing trade, announces there will indeed be a bathtub scene in his sagebrush epic, "The Plainsman."

When De Mille donned a 10-gallon hat began to practice a bow-legged gait, and vowed to do a Western, Hollywood thought Cecil B. was stumped—that he'd never be able to plant a bathtub in the staked plain. But little did they know.

De Mille has managed a tub, right enough, but it won't be so gorgeous as the Roman layout full of milk in which the shapely Claudette Colbert dunked for "The Sign of the Cross." The public will be treated to a shot of Wild Bill Hickok, discharging his Saturday night ablutions right smack in Deadwood City, S. Dak.

Gangling, spindle-shanked Gary Cooper is slated for "Wild Bill." The bath will be located in the back room of a barber shop, and while the tubs of the time were homely tin affairs, it may be that De Mille will manage to pretty this one up.

At any rate, the compliment to Cooper is subtle, and he should appreciate it. The picture will place him in class with Gloria Swanson, Florence Vidor, Leatrice Joy and Kay Johnson, who have been bathtubbed by De Mille.

Having a Heat Wave

2 P. M. Your correspondent awoke dazedly, and staggered to the cold shower, his footsteps across the carpet etched in leaky pools of perspiration . . . The bathtub was negotiated in par, only one slip, a pirouette that Gambarelli taught me years ago. . . . For five minutes the cold water sluiced down, spattering merrily over ye correspondent and then caroming happily to the tiled floor . . . I could picture it leaking through the floor and ruining the living room below but, I was in no mood to dicker . . . Invigorated, I dressed and stepped back into the bedroom, only to be felled by a smother of heat . . . The Sullivans, however, are made of stern stuff . . . At the count of nine, I arose and wobbled out of the room, out of the house and into the street.

* * * *

3 P. M. "It's pretty hot," said a mild old lady, with a sweet face, at 50th St. and Sixth Ave. . . . I felled her with one blow . . . At 51st St., I took a kick at an infant, but barked my shins on the carriage wheel . . . It is difficult, as W. C. Fields once pointed out, to hit a moving target.

* * * *

4 P. M. Weakly I reeled into 515 Park Ave. and shot up seventeen stories to the establishment conducted by Earl Benham . . . Mr. Benham was swinging back and forth on the chandelier . . . "It is the only way to raise a breeze," he screamed as he flew over my head.

* * * *

5 P. M. "It is all in the mind. There is no heat wave," an old friend assured me. There was a Pollyana gleam in his eye. I flattened him with a long overhand right to the temple.

* * * *

6 P. M. Some friends called in an open car. We were still at the curb when it started raining. For 10 minutes we labored feverishly to put the top up again. Then it stopped raining.

* * * *

8 P. M. At Mount Sinai Hospital to visit a friend. His nurse tells us that the doctors are preparing for an emergency appendectomy. "I feel sorry for those poor doctors," the nurse says, "in that hot operating room with those heavy robes and stifling gauze masks" . . . "That's tough," agreed one of us, "but how about the patient? Is he going to have fun?" . . . The nurse glared at us.

* * * *

9 P. M. At Palisades Park Feature of the evening is a fellow who dives 100 feet, a backdive, into a blazing pool, the gasoline-covered surface of it ignited by a torch. It is a spectacular feat, great showmanship: "He didn't dive so well tonight," explained one of the owners of the park. "He was badly sunburned this afternoon."

* * * *

10 P. M. The Marine Deck at the Riviera is sheer comfort, a stiff breeze blowing in from the Hudson, sprawled below in a liquid patch. "Too bad," says Jack Arken, "that old Joe Humphreys died. He was a grand character—the only man I ever knew who YELLED for QUIET." As we passed over Washington Bridge to town, I was thinking of Joe Humphreys, the East Side youngster who had made a big name for himself in that huge city which we were approaching. The winds rippling the Hudson seemed to bring again Joe's hoarse command: "Qui-utt, please—qui-utt" . . . And now Humphreys, who made a profession by yelling for quiet, has achieved the quiet he asked for . . . Suddenly, the heat wave and its minor discomforts seemed very trivial—for hot or cold, wet or dry, life is worth the living . . . It's a good old world, at that!

About The Showshops

AS THE young man remarked, when asked why, in a traffic emergency, he had driven his car through a florist's plate glass window, "it seemed the thing to do, at the time!" I mean that old device of the silent days in the cinema of celebrating a "Greater Movie Season" every August.

NELSON B. BELL.

Any veteran picture-goer will recall that up to a comparatively few years ago it was the national custom for film exhibitors, with the encouragement and full backing of the Will H. Hays office, to concentrate their publicity barrages on four or five exceptional dog-day bookings in order to convince the public that it was not necessary to wait until cool fall weather to see good pictures. Sometimes it worked and sometimes it didn't.

Now, the vast improvement in the quality of the general run of motion picture productions, the perfection of sound and the efficient air-conditioning of even the largest theaters has caused the old "Greater Movie Season" dodge to appear just a little ridiculous, even if it did "seem the thing to do, at the time."

For example, this week in Washington two of the year's most impressive film plays are on view, in "San Francisco," costarring Clark Glable, Jeanette MacDonald and Spencer Tracy, at the Palace, and "The White Angel," starring Kay Francis, as Florence Nightingale, at the Earle. Such elaborate and costly productions never would have been presented at this time of year in the old days—not through any especial perversity or chicanery on the part of the exhibitors, but because such profligacy would have been a sheer waste at a time when it was impossible to lure the public into the theater on any pretext whatsoever. But the matter does not end with two extraordinary films. The summer, it seems, is to be full of them.

It already has been divulged by John J. Payette, zone manager for the Warners in this territory, that neither Marc Connelly's "The Green Pastures," nor Hervey Allen's "Anthony Adverse," in celluloid form, is to be withheld until fall. Both will be shown locally late this month or early in August. Even Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is getting impatient over its screen production of "Romeo and Juliet." That pretentious vehicle for the talents of Norma Shearer, Leslie Howard, John Barrymore and a brilliant cast is to be screened for the press in Los Angeles tomorrow night.

And now, on top of all this, comes Manager Hardie Meakin, of RKO-Keith's, with the terse disclosure that "Mary of Scotland," RKO-Radio's picturization of the magnificent blank verse drama by Maxwell Anderson, starring Katharine Hepburn in the title role, created by Helen Hayes on the stage, will be shown in a special prerelease engagement in his theater beginning on Friday, August 7.

This is another of the season's imposing achievements that will be awaited with greatest interest by reason of the stage version's having been accorded its first performance on any stage in this city, with one of the Capital's distinguished native daughters starred, and by further reason of the able cast that has been assembled for the camera rendition of one of Anderson's most profoundly moving plays.

Supporting Miss Hepburn in "Mary of Scotland" will be Fredric March, as Bothwell, the role created by Philip Merivale; Florence Eldridge (Mrs. Fredric March) as Queen Elizabeth, first played by Helen Menken; Douglas Walton is Lord Darnley, John Carradine as Rizzio and Moroni Olsen as John Knox, originally played by Fritz Leiber. Something of the caliber of the cast in its entirety may be gathered from the fact that Monte Blue, once a star in his own right, is programmed as "A Messenger."

"Mary of Scotland" was adapted to the screen from the Anderson script by Dudley Nichols and directed by John Ford, with musical setting by Nathaniel Shilkret. It is a worthy addition to the growing list of superlative screen plays to be seen in Washington during a season formerly deemed anathema to anything but "horse opera" and slapstick comedy.

* * * *

It is also part of the Meakin revelation that the engagement of Barbara Stanwyck, Robert Young and Gene Raymond in "The Bride Walks Out," will come to an end at RKO-Keith's tonight. Beginning tomorrow, which, to keep the record straight, is by way of being Wednesday, July 15, the attraction on Fifteenth street will be the much-discussed—by Betty and me—screen "sleeper" known by the name of "Let's Sing Again and starring that prodigious boy vocalist, Bobby Breen—with lopsided Henry Armetta along for good measure and adult interest. There are no cinematographic fireworks in "Let's Sing Again," but there is about it a simple quality of heart-warming human appeal that audiences will find to their liking. And that little Breen fellow can sing, make no mistake about that. Of course, none of you who have heard him over the air will make any mistake about that, but it seems worth emphasizing, anyway.

* * * *

Speaking of Maxwell Anderson, as we were somewhere back there, Katharine Cornell, who closes her season in Shaw's "Saint Joan" in the Curran Theater, San Francisco, with the matinee performance this Saturday, will begin rehearsals in his new play, "The Wingless Victory," in October. In the meantime, after ending her tour Saturday, the first lady of the theater will spend a few days in Taos, N. Mex., thence will visit her father in Coburg, Ontario, where she spent many of her holidays as a child, and in August will sail for Majorca, where she will rest for several weeks.

As for Miss Cornell's supporting company in "Saint Joan," Arthur Byron, the Inquisitor, will go to Skowhegan, Me.—that would be a sleeper jump—and Maurice Evans will return to London. Charles Waldron and George Coulouris will remain in California for several weeks, while Eduardo Ciannelli will go to Hollywood to play Trock, his original role, in the film play of "Winterset." Kent Smith will resume his motion-picture contract. So now you know.

The postman rings twice. Along with a card from the prima donna, helping out the moon with the high tide business at Chautauqua Lake, N. Y., comes one from Sammy Lewis and Patti Moore, the dancing team recently seen at Loew's Fox, mailed in Honolulu, H. I., their first stop en route to Australia for a flock of bookings, after which they go to South Africa. Sammy and Patti would be Goldie Ahearn's brother and sister-in-law, remember?

Turning forward the pages of the Chronicle of Thespis—yet still within the same chapter on melodrama—the Roadside Theater advanced some 40 years from the period of "Under the Gaslight" and presented "Arizona," the Augustus Thomas drama of love and intrigue in the United States Cavalry." And as they have done with the two previous undertakings this season, the players last night presented a lusty drama, intensely played.

Although the first two acts of the play were somewhat slow and "stagey"—and the reason is not far to seek—the last two acts picked up momentum and sped along to a rousing climax amid applause for the maligned hero and hisses for the villain. This is no simple excursion into the drama; rather is "Arizona" a potpourri of nearly the entire catalogue of dramatic situations, with no less than five affaires de coeur—sacred and profane—to satisfy the comprehensive sweep of this facile author. Add to that the attachments of family and association, and there is here represented as complicated a dramatic fabric as one would care to see.

With the same precision which marked the performance of "Tour de Monde"—whose acting company is generously represented here—the players collectively drew from their anti-thetical parts the maximum of dramatic effect. Richard Kreuzberg is the collar-ad hero whose protection of the honor of the colonel's wife (the accomplished Virginia True) leads to a sudden termination of his military career. His affections, however, are for the wife's sister, and Lansing Hall whether in the riding habit of the 90's or the more traditional gowns of the period, was lovely, indeed.

Requires Long Cast.

The main villain occurs before the play opens—although plenty of it happens between 8:40 and 11:15 p. m.—with Betty Grey as the docile Dutch lass who loved not wisely but too well and Marvin Beers as the soldier whose catalogue of virtues was amazingly incomplete. Miss Gray was fine, taking rank among those in the cast who did most toward the play's success, although, with her father (Harrison Libbey), the assumed accent was occasionally forgotten. Mr. Beers gave an unusual performance. One might even go so far as to suggest him as competition to Eugene Kressin and Harold Stepler—he was that sleethy.

J. Edmond Veitch and Elinor Cox Karsten were effective as the rancher and his wife; Fred Haskin, jr., even with the applied age, was good as the doctor; Jean Smith was a comely school teacher who turns nurse; Milton Freedman was great as the "bes' dam' vaquero of them all," and Nelson Frankling made a good Chinese cook.

The direction of Harold A. Weinberger was nicely timed, but the appearance of George Farrington, as the colonel, on three days' notice, while filling the breech with fortitude and assurance, resulted in a bit of hesitancy now and then. The costumes of Dorothy Croissant were very good, but Edith I. Allen might have given the play settings better than those which may be termed merely adequate.

One should not forget the entr'acte, the "theme song" of the Eleventh Cavalry, sung by the troupers with vigor and enthusiastically received.

The Federal Diary

By Betty Read.

The thirty-second special commemorative stamp issued under the present Postoffice administration was announced yesterday.

It will honor Susan B. Anthony, pioneer leader in the movement for women's suffrage, and will go on sale August 26, the sixteenth anniversary of the proclamation of ratification of the nineteenth amendment to the Constitution signifying victory in the hard and long battle for equal suffrage rights.

It is to be of 3-cent denomination and will bear, as the central motif, a portrait of the old-time suffrage leader whose portrait hangs on the walls of many women's organizations devoted to political education or direct party politics. Announcement of the new stamp from the department says it is being issued in "recognition of women's share in the development of this country and their social and economic responsibilities in our national life."

The new stamp issue brings to mind the many we have had under the present department administration and, the way we count, there have been 31.

But this does not include a number where special combinations of issues or other things of interest to collectors. It merely records the number of different pictures, as it were, that the printing machines have been called upon to place on stamps.

The initial order on each of these stamps was 75,000,000, but in many cases this number has run well over twice that amount. For instance, the one popular at the moment is the Texas Centennial stamp, and the original supply has long since vanished.

Just what it has cost the Government to put out these issues is not available but the cost is estimated at so many cents a thousand stamps.

Recently two requests for commemorative stamps were refused. Harvard University wanted one, said Postoffice officials, to commemorate their 300th anniversary in the fall, but if that had been granted a whole new field of commemorative stamps would be opened. Cleveland also asked for one but was refused.

The latest special issue goes on limited sale in five different postoffices today in recognition of the first white settlers of the old Oregon Territory, and the next special one will be the Susan B. Anthony stamp. In prospect is a special Army and Navy series, but the details of that have not been worked out.

Among the special issues have been ten different views in the National Parks series, Boulder Dam, NRA (2 sets), Century of Progress, San Diego Fair, Little America, Gen. Kosciusko (comemmorating his naturalization), Proclamation of Peace (the first issued under the present Administration), the Graf Zeppelin, Maryland Tercentenary, Trans-Pacific and others.

For every special issue at least 500 to 600 applications asking for it were received by the department.

No person and no job can be highminded and serious all the time, but some people's most serious moments give a smile to others—to wit, the story that is going around the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce which reached there via Milwaukee, where Margaret Dolan, of the bureau works, answering commerce queries.

A letter landed in her office recently from Benin City, Nigeria. It was from a young lady who asks Uncle Sam to "fulfill my wishes and train me up in education, for I want to be one of the well-educated creatures of the twentieth century.

That might be enough of a task, but in addition she asks for a catalogue which will teach her how to "be cleverer than all my friends, to be very lucky and to succeed in all undertakings such as sweepstakes, raffles and competitions of any kind."

The postscript on the letter offers to pay for that United States service in Virginia coin.

Dr. John R. Mohler, chief of the Bureau of Animal Industry in the Department of Agriculture, is on the high seas on his way to Leipzig, Germany, to address the World's Poultry Congress, which meets there from July 24 to August 2.

With him are several other Government experts, who will tell the story of the economic importance of poultry in America and to extend an invitation to hold the next World's Congress in this country.

The fact that the lowly barnyard hen was important enough to bring about a world congress amused us at first and then, on checking with the Agriculture Department, we find from their latest figures that in 1935 the chicken crop (if it can be called that) was worth $223,000,000, and that same year 592,000,000 chickens were raised in the country. Also was the fact that 31,000,000,000 eggs were produced in the country that year and that the New York market alone sold 204,600,000 pounds of dressed poultry.

Now we understand why Dr. Mohler, Dr. Hugh C. McPhee, chief of the division of animal husbandry, and Dr. C. W. Warburton, director of extension work of the department, are on their way to Germany.

The congresses are held every third year and from the United States will go about 50 pens of live birds, giving special prominence to American breeds. A number of scientific exhibits of the department showing the latest American contributions on poultry breeding, disease control and other aspects of the industry, as well as a general outline of the requirements of the National Poultry Improvement plan now in effect in 34 States, will be a feature of the Government's participation in the congress.

Good 'Ole Summer.

I'd love to shirk, this Guv'ment work,
When the mercury's at a hundred—
I'd love to stroll, on some beach cold,
Or wander where cool fancy led.

Instead of heat, and blistering feet,
And molten lead upon my brow,
I'd love to quit, and just go sit,
As Omar Khayyam did—enow!

But I can't balk nor must I squawk,
I must perspire 'long with the mob,
Of course it's hot, but like as not,
There's others sweatin' for my job!

Party of 450 May Go to Olympics

Fund Is $25,000 Short of Goal; Swimmers Need $6,000.

Treasurer Certain All Teams Will Go as Funds Pour in.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 13.—It looked like clear sailing for approximately 450 American men and women athletes, coaches, managers and officials to the eleventh Olympic games in Berlin today as the general fund deficit was reduced to $25,000.

As members of Uncle Sam's team assembled at their hotel to acquire credentials and for final instructions preparatory to embarking in the liner Manhattan Wednesday, the wheels of the Olympic machinery whirred to wipe out the shortage. The prospects appeared good it would be done.

"We're only $25,000 short," said Gustavus T. Kirby, treasurer of the American Olympic committee before he went into a conference with the administration committee. "We have 48 hours to raise it and I am sure it will be done."

Forty per cent of the shortage is accountable to the men's and women's swimming teams, and the field hockey and fencing teams. The swimming groups are short $3,000 each and the field hockey and fencing teams are shy $2,000 each.

Two Jewish members of the 400-meter relay team, Sam Stroller, of Cincinnati, and Marty Glickman, of New York, said they have no scruples about competing in Germany in view of racial discrimination there.

"I feel athletics are above racial prejudice and discrimination of all sort," said Glickman. "I want to show Nazi Germany that the Aryan myth of supremacy isn't true."

Stoller, who has a German-Protestant stepmother, asserted "it makes no difference to us at home. This is an athletic expedition. Nothing else matters."

Harlem's enthusiasts by the hundreds invaded the hotel lobby to acclaim their latest hero since the downfall of Joe Louis. Hundreds of Negroes stampeded and almost smothered Ohio State's great Negro star, Jesse Owens. He obliged them with handshakes and autographs.

The first piece of American Olympic baggage was berthed in the Manhattan today. It was the University of Washington's eight-oared shell, "the Huskies' Clipper." The Pacific Coast collegians will defend Uncle Sam's four-times won crew honors in it.

Glenn Cuningham, who is so accustomed to being by himself in a race on the cinder track, was lost for the first time in his life. He spent fully an hour vainly seeking the track and field headquarters. Finally he went to a bellhop and asked to be led to it.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

This department is taking a bow as the first to hail the long-awaited slump of the New York Yankees.

Of course all I said at the time, a week ago last Sunday, was that the Yankees were the greatest ball club to sink a spike in the turf since 1927 and would win the pennant in a gallop.

POVICH.

That stopped 'em, as any reader of this pillar of type will admit. I'm the guy who picked Joe Louis to belt Schmeling out of there in the first round; Richmond to take Grant, and Goliath to exterminate David with his fright wig. If I were to pick Man O'War in a race against his shadow, the sun would probably set in the East that day, casting the shadow far in front and beating Man O'War by a coupla lengths.

Ever since the day I picked the Yankees to keep going from where they were and spread-eagle the rest of the American League field, they've found the going tough. In fact, the team that had won nearly three victories for its every defeat up to that point, has won only twice in seven games since.

On the afternoon of the very day that this department rose to remark that the 1936 Yankees were perhaps as great a ball team as those 1927 Yankees who won the pennant by 19 games and then mopped up the Pirates in four straight in the World Series, my champions got themselves knocked off, 9 to 3, by the Nats—whom they had just finished licking in a double-header the day before.

The Yankees got a slight break when there were no league games scheduled for the next three days, but last Friday they met up with the Cleveland Indians, a notoriously poor road team, and got licked on their home lot, 11 to 4. They did get a measure of revenge when they beat Cleveland, 18-0, the next day, but on July 11 the Povich curse caught up with 'em again an dthey lost, 10-2.

They've just finished two days' business with the sixth-place White Sox, and have taken two straight lickings for their pains. Their once haughty 11-game lead has shrunk to 8½ games, and the team that is pressing 'em is the Detroit Tigers who are up there despite the fact they lost two out of three games here last week.

Their Murderers Row, that pitcher-wrecking crew of Lou Gehrig, Bill Dickey, Joe DiMaggio, Tony Lazzeri and George Selkirk, has flopped dismally since that day I compared 'em to that 1927 array of Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig, Bob Meusel, Joe Dugan and Earl Combs. In fact, except for that one game in which the Yanks beat Cleveland, 18-8, Murderers' Row was not able to give the Yankee pitchers more than four runs to work with on any day of its last seven games.

There has been no great contrast in the success of the Yankees' pitchers during the team's slump and during those early months of the season when the Yanks were rapidly stretching their lead to a prohibitive margin. The Yanks' pitchers, save for Monte Pearson, never have been any great shucks this season. It was the native dynamite in the Yankees' bats that carried the team to its triumphs, but something has happened to the hitters.

They aren't carrying the load for the pitchers, and that leaves the Yankees in a bad way. Even Monte Pearson has been occupied for the best part of a month attempting to accumulate his eleventh and twelfth pitching victories. When the Yankees are not hitting they are not much of a ball team, but until this department ventured that the Yankees couldn't be beaten, there was no suspicion that the Yankee hitters would stop hitting.

In winning five of these last seven games with the Yankees, the Indians and White Sox have opened the eyes of the rest of the American League clubs to the myth of the Yankees' invincibility. The Tigers are charging on 'em and the Nats are only a game and a half behind the Tigers. In the knowledge that the Yanks are no super team, each challenger will be battling with a new inspiration.

The Yankees blew a 12-game lead in 1934 and a 10-game lead in 1926. If they blow that 11-game lead that they held at the July 4 mark this year, then that will make three times hand-running, which should give 'em permanent possession of the False Alarm championship.

Nats Subdue Browns, 9-3, Gain 3rd

Bluege Has Perfect Day at Bat; Chapman Helps in Attack.

Whitehill Goes Route Despite 12 Hits and Mates' Errors.

By Shirley Povich.
Sports Editor of The Post.

Against some rare old pre-war pitching stock produced right out of the American League cellar by the Browns, the Nats took 14 solid slugs yesterday and ended up slightly high. In fact, the Nats ascended into third place in the league standings.

They stopped the Browns' one-game winning streak by hammering ancient Elon Hogsett for eight hits and 7 runs in the giddy fifth and sixth innings and won the ball game, 9 to 3.

Hogsett had a 3-to-1 lead when the fun started, but five hits by the Nats in the fifth left the Browns trailing, 5 to 3, and they came up with 3 more hits and 3 more runs against the wobbly Hogsett in the very next inning.

Earl Whitehill, pitching for the Nats, didn't exactly stop the Browns cold. He surrendered an even dozen hits and the Browns were helped by three Washington errors, but when the occasion demanded some effective pitching Whitehill responded.

Bluege, Chapman Help.

Ossie Bluege and Ben Chapman were the leading offenders against Hogsett and a young fellow named Kimberlin, who succeeded him in the ninth inning. All that Bluege contributed to the Nats' attack was four hits in four official times at bat. On a fifth appearance he managed to get himself hit by a pitched ball. In his five turns at the plate Chapman singled three times to rightfield and walked twice.

Their victory served to put the Nats a half game ahead of the back-sliding Boston Red Sox and the oncoming Cleveland Indians. They are still a game and a half to the rear of the second-place

Cochrane Returns, Has Sore Throat

Tigers' Pilot Will Undergo Doctor's Examination.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, July 13.—Mickey Cochrane, manager of the Detroit Tigers, came home today from a three-week vacation spent on a Wyoming ranch, his skin bronzed, his nerves quieted, but suffering from a sore throat which he said might keep him out of action for ten days more.

He said his physician would examine him tomorrow, and determine how soon he could resume his duties.

The Tigers, he said, "certainly have been going great," and Acting Manager Del Baker "has been doing a swell job."

Cochrane said he had had no recurrence of the thyroid ailment that caused him to retire temporarily from his managerial duties.

Chisox Humble Yankees, 6-3; Cut Lead

Whitehead Gives Up Five Hits; 24th Homer for Lou Gehrig.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 13.—Held in check by Johnny Whitehead's five-hit pitching, the New York Yankees fell before the Chicago White Sox, 6 to 3, today in the rubber contest of the three-game series. The defeat, coupled with the Tigers' victory over the Athletics, reduced the Yanks' lead to 8½ games over the world champions.

The Sox got away in front with a run in the first inning, drove Monte Pearson, seeking his twelfth victory, to the showers with a three-run attack in the third and then picked up another tally in each of the seventh and ninth frames off Johnny Murphy and Pat Malone, respectively. The seventh-inning run was a homer by Jimmy Dykes.

The Yanks did not break into the scoring column until the fourth, when Red Rolfe singled and circled the bases as Whitehead handed out one of his three passes and two outs. Lou Gehrig personally accounted for the other two New York runs in the sixth, slamming out his twenty-fourth homer of the season, with Rolfe on base.

The circuit blow gave Gehrig the major league leadership with a margin of one over Jimmy Foxx.

Sarron Swells Olympic Fund With $100 Gift

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 13.—Pete Sarron, featherweight champion, today sent a contribution of $100 to help overcome the shortage of funds to send American athletes to the Olympics in Berlin.

Sarron, who was an alternate to Fidel LaBarba on the 1928 boxing team, sent the contribution from his home in Alexandria, Va., to Bill Streit, jr., manager of the wrestling team.

Capt. Eyston Speeds Toward Auto Record

Bonneville Salt Flats, Utah, July 13 (AP).—Crumbling three score world land speed records under the wheels of his thundering "speed of the winds," Capt. George Eyston rolled on tonight hoping to beat the 48-hour record of 109.54 miles an hour.

The gray-haired Englishman, confident but nervous, was unable to sleep during "off hours." He paced the flats while a countryman, Bert Denly, was at the wheel of the 12-cylinder, shark-nosed racing car.

With the two-ton speedster performing perfectly, Eyston and Denly tumbled records with regularity.

Pit stops were brief. The expert crew once changed all four tires, refueled and added oil in 49 seconds. Once Eyston misjudged his fuel supply and was forced to push the machine several hundred yards. He lost 17 minutes.

As the Red Streak whirled around the 10-mile circular track of white salt, passing the 30-hour mark, Eyston conserved the mighty (Rolls Royce) machine's stamina for the hot evening grind.

Starting the two days and nights of endurance driving at 7:29 a. m. (Pacific Standard Time) yesterday, Eyston hoped to survive tonight's test and surpass the 48-hour record tomorrow shortly after dawn.

Spencer Scores In Bedford Open

Bedford Springs, Pa., July 13 (AP). Only one Washington professional—Cliff Spencer, of Beaver Dam Country Club—finished in the money in the 36-hole Bedford Springs Open golf championship today.

Spencer scored 75-69—144 to finish five shots from the winner, Vincent Eldred, Pittsburgh pro, who carded 71-68.

Al Treder, of Manor, scored 74-74—148 and Leo Walper, Bethesda driving range instructor, 77-71—148.

Maury Fitzgerald, of Kenwood Golf and County Club, won the low amateur prize by virtue of his 76-80—156.

Sam Parks, of Pittsburgh, former National Open champion, finished with 145.

Tied with Spencer at 143 were Joby Connors and J. O'Donnell, of Pittsburgh and Cameron Trent, of Duquesne. Perry Del Vecchio, of Greensburg, Pa., and Ed Morgan, of Cumberland, scored 142's, each.

Buffalo Boy Is Penalized For Fouls

Forfeits 3 Rounds, Wins Only One Against D. C. Champion.

Everett Rallies After No Count Knockdown in Fourth Round.

By Bill McCormick.

Al Delaney, who has looked pretty good here as a winner, was utterly unimpressive on the receiving end, losing a unanimous ten-round decision to Buck Everett, at Griffith Stadium last night.

The Buffalo youth, who handled the situation very coolly against less capable opposition, did everything that is not in the books, once the going got rough. Just as an example, he was penalized one round—the third—for heeling, and two—the fifth and ninth—for hitting on the break. Other flagrant violations of ring ethics were so numerous that Referee Denny Hughes apparently decided to ignore them as it did not make much difference anyway since Buck was taking good care of himself.

Delaney Holds.

Because of Delaney's holding tactics, when he was not engaged in methods of fighting generally disapproved, the bout was less interesting than that of Everett's fights in the District, but it was entertaining enough.

Everett was down for no count in the fourth round as Delaney spun him off balance and sunk home a hard left hook to the body. Buck bounced off the canvas to run into another flock of lefts which forced him to hold and duck for once. Al shot his bolt in that round and was not very much in the fight from that point.

Delaney Timorous.

The entire fight, which was witnessed by 1,800, was a case of Everett's bulldoggish tactics against Delaney's rather timorous style of pitching leather. When Buck was hurt he fought back. When Delaney was hurt he covered or tried to rough his way out of trouble.

Delaney's best weapon was a left hook to the body, which he landed often enough to keep the fight from mediocrity. Only once or twice did Everett let him get set to toss his Sunday sock, and then Buck either ducked, blocked or absorbed the punch without suffering undue punishment.

Everett employed a good left hook to the head and a nicely timed right uppercut to bring him victory.

U. S. Runners to Have No Romp In Olympics, Despite Tryouts

(Note: This is the first of two stories on American Olympic track and field prospects, written by the Associated Press sports editor, who has covered the last three Olympiads and will accompany the U. S. team to Berlin this week. It deals with the outlook in track competition. Tomorrow the field events will be discussed.)

By Alan Gould.

Associated Press Sports Editor.

New York, July 13.—At the risk of tossing some cold water on the enthusiasm generated by America's record-smashing final track and field tryouts, it may as well be suggested now that the United States will enjoy no free and easy romp in the quest for Olympic championships at Berlin.

In the first place, there are numerous hazards attached to the job of keeping foot-racers tuned up between the time of their embarkation this Wednesday and the actual Olympic competition, August 2-9, inclusive. Not even by profiting from the lessons of the debacle at Amsterdam in 1928 can the conditioning dangers be entirely avoided. The coaching staff headed by Lawson Robertson has a job in psychology as well as physical problems on its hands.

Secondly and more to the point of this discussion, our picked performers will be up against the

Huge Olympic Plant Is Dedicated

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, July 13.—The Reichssportfield, 325 acres of playland built at a cost of many millions of dollars, today formally was declared competed and ready for the Olympic games, August 1 to 16.

With all technical equipment in operation, a dress rehearsal for the international games was held this afternoon.

Located about 10 miles west of the center of Berlin, the Reichssportfield is a collection of stadia for track and field, swimming, tennis, hockey, polo, equestrian sports, of huge rally fields, an outdoor theater and numerous tennis courts. It includes also the buildings of a high school for physical culture, its two cinder tracks which will be the training center for Olympic participants, and six big lawns for field games.

Designed by the architect Werner March, son of the man who constructed the stadium for the wartime games of 1916, the tremendous project cost somewhere between 35,000,000 and 80,000,000 marks, according to various official estimates. Roughly that is between $14,000,000 and $32,000,000.

About 3,000,000,000 cubic meters of soil were removed, the stadium planned for the 1916 games was torn down and a horse race track with grand stands for 40,000 spectators had to give way to the field.

The Olympic stadium rises in the center of the flat field flanked by slender high towers on either side. It is built more steeply than the Olympic stadium at Los Angeles and will accommodate 100,000 spectators.

Directly facing the "marathon gate" through which the columns of teams from 51 nations will march into the stadium on August 1 is a huge rally field for 400,000.

The swimming stadium, erected close to the Olympic stadium, will hold 20,000 spectators. A subterranean heating plant keeps the water at 70 degrees Fahrenheit. Some distance away is an outdoor theater, seating 20,000, which will be the scene of gymnastic competitions.

Deering, D. C. Boy, Sets Swim Mark as Visitors Top Field in Meet

2 Other Local Records Go Down

Invading Stars Capture Six Firsts in Glen Echo Carnival.

By John R. Vosburgh.

Washington failed to get an even break yesterday in the opening day's events of the two-day swimming meet at Glen Echo's Crystal Pool. Visiting swimmers from Baltimore, Philadelphia and York, Pa. made off with six first places in the 11 events held. Three pool records, therefore District records, were set during the afternoon and evening.

The carnival reaches its climax tonight when the National Junior men's high diving championship brings out a field of 11 divers, 6 of them from clubs scattered in various parts of the country, and 5 from Washington. Of chief interest to Washington followers will be the return to competition of Johnnie Broaddus, popular Shoreham star, former District indoor and outdoor champion, in a fourth effort to gain the one championship which has escaped him three successive times.

Faces Strong Field.

Broaddus faces a strong field, including John Tuomi, of New York City; Gene Davis and George Williams, of the Washington Airport pool; Harry Cranston, of Princeton University; Albert Patnik, of Columbus, Ohio; Bernie Goldberg, of the Baltimore Y. M. H. A.; Paul Hines, of the Lakeside Club, Louisville, Ky.; Fred Stieber, of Towson, Md.; Carlos Fernandi, of New York, and Johnnie Marshall, veteran Washington competitor.

Of the three records set yesterday, only one was earned by a Washington entrant. Young Harvey Deering, Northeast Boys Club speed king, turned back the challenge of Elias Blumberg, of Baltimore, to win the boys' 60-yard free style in the afternoon. His record-breaking time was 33 seconds flat.

Out of Towners Win.

Rita Augusterfer, queen of the District's free-style swimmers, maintained her supremacy by retaining her women's 220-yard District championship. Ann Bono, sprint queen of the city, was a fairly good runner-up, with Leonora Taube third. Miss Augusterfer fell eight seconds short of breaking her District record of 3:01 2-5.

One of the two records broken by out-of-towners went to pretty Margaret Russell, of Baltimore, who won the 180-yard colorful medley swim event in 2 minutes 44.2 seconds, breaking her own record of 2:45. Muriel Campbell, of Penn A. C., Philadelphia, was second, and Leonora Taube, Washington's medley champ, third.

Dorothy Campbell, also of the Penn A. C., flashed to the 60-yard backstroke first-place honors with a record-breaking demonstration of 43.4 seconds to shatter the former record of 43 seconds held by Dorothy Forbes, of Camden, N. J. Florence Farwell, a newcomer to the Shoreham team, gave Washington a creditable second place in this event.

Bob Jordan and Mildred Aronson, of the Ambassador, and Miss Bono won the men's 90-yard free style, girls' 60-yard backstroke and women's 90-yard freestyle, respectively.

Decker, O'Steen Score in Net Tourney

Charlotte Decker, semi-finalist in the District girls' playground tennis championships last year, gained the fourth round yesterday when she swept aside Harriet Gordon, of Montrose, 6—2, 6—1, at Chevy Chase Playground. The Janney playground lass, who was eliminated last year by Champion Willie O'Steen, of Virginia Avenue, will meet Helen Miller, of Chevy Chase, today in a quarter-final round match.

Miss Decker displayed too much experience for the younger Miss Gordon. She showed considerable improvement over her last year's performances, exhibiting a strong service and steady forehand drives.

Eileen Lennon, of Montrose, a quarter-finalist last year, downed Doris Kitchen, of Georgetown, 8—2, 6—0, in another outstanding triumph and faces Anna Leigus, of Georgetown, today in another feature match.

Plays Today.

Miss O'Steen is expected to swing into defense of her championship again today as are Helen Orme and Lucille McDowell, the city doubles champions from Burroughs Playground.

Other important matches today bring together Irma Willard, of Phillips, another quarter-finalist last year, and Margaret Gray, of Twin Oaks, and Eleanor Yoder, of Raymond, and Virginia Hunter, of Twin Oaks. Miss Willard trimmed Doris McCarty, of Twin Oaks, 6—3, 6—3, yesterday while Miss Gray was whitewashing Ida Madeoy, of Park 6—0, 6—0. Political and Sport Celebrities Throng Humphrey's Funeral

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 13.—The sporting world he served so long turned out by the thousands today to pay a last tribute to Joe Humphreys, veteran fight and wrestling announcer.

Services for Humphreys, who died Friday, were held at St. Malachy's Church (the actors' church) in West Forty-ninth street. Here a solemn requiem mass was celebrated by the Rev. Patrick A. Gallagher, assistant pastor, for years a friend of the announcer. Interment followed on Staten Island.

Political and sports celebrities marched in the long procession from the funeral parlors to the church. Here fully 1,000 of Humphreys' friends crowded into the edifice, while twice that many lined the streets outside.

Former Gov. Alfred E. Smith; Commissioner of Correction Edward P. Mulrooney, former Mayor John P. O'Brien and John F. Curry, former leader of Tammany Hall, were among the political leaders who marched.

The sports world was represented by Brig. Gen. John J. Phelan, chairman of the New York State Athletic Commission; Heavyweight Champion James J. Braddock, Jack Dempsey, Jack Curley, wrestling promoter; James J. Johnston, Madison Square Garden matchmaker; Mike Jacobs, head of the Twentieth Century Sporting Club; Johnny Dundee, former holder of several ring titles; Paul Berlenbach and Mickey Walker, both former champions, and Arthur Donovan, the referee.

Following the mass at St. Malachy's, the funeral party circled Madison Square Garden, less than a block distant, then proceeded to New Dorp, Staten Island.

Sports editors and boxing writers of New York newspapers, all old friends of the famous announcer, served as pallbearers and honorary pallbearers.

U. S. Will Have No Romp in Olympics

strongest kind of opposition in most events. In addition a big majority of our athletes will experience the Olympic pressure for the first time.

While there is no actual "ganging up" against America in the Olympics, this country's performers always have borne the brunt of world challenge. Perhaps it is because our athletes get more ballyhoo or place greater emphasis upon record-smashing feats than, for example, the British.

The United States appears reasonably sure of triumph in no more than six of the 14 individual track events.

Americans figure to capture the 100, 200 and 400 meter races, both hurdles events and the 400-meter relay. On form our footracers have at least an even chance to capture the 800 for the first time since 1912, together with prospects of breaking through to win the classic 1,500-meter and the 3,000-meter steeplechase. Don Lash, Indiana's fine distance runner, can be given no more than a long-shot chance in either the 5,000 or 10,000 meters races. Prospects in the Marathon, the 50,000-meter walk and the 1,600-meter relay are doubtful.

The redoubtable Jesse Owens should outsprint the world. There is no footracer at home or abroad in the same sprint class with the Ohio State Negro, who has not been extended in making the Olympic team in three events.

England has developed a strong trio for the 400 meters in a A. G. K. Brown, William Roberts and Godfrey Rampling, the latter an Olympic veteran, but none has matched the times of the American standard-bearers, Archie Williams, Hal Smallwood and Jimmy Luvalle. South Africa's Shore is another contender.

Minus Ben Eastman, the American 800-meter runners will be led by another Negro flier, John Woodruff, a potetnial record-breaker, and the more experienced Chuck Hornbostel. The veteran Canadian Negro, Phil Edwards, who once ran for New York University, has made an impressive comeback and may prove the man for the Americans to beat. England's prospects have been uncertain since Tom Hampson, the 1932 winner, retired, but J. V. Powell is a distinct threat, along with the Polish ace, Kucharski.

Even with the powerhouse Cunningham back in form and a fellow Kansan, Archie San Romani, romping into the picture at his heels, there is no reason for excessive confidence in the "metric mile." The two main reasons are named Jack Lovelock, fleet New Zealander, who has beaten this country's best, and England's Stanley Wooderson, the favorite.

The South's twin gifts to world-record hurdling fame, Forrest (Spec) Towns, of Georgia, and Glenn (Slats) Hardin, of Louisiana State, appear to outclass all opposition to such an extent that only accidents can keep them from Olympic triumphs.

The Finns will have to excel themthemselves to keep Hal Manning from leading them over the hurdles and water jump in the steeplechase.

The marathoners, Johnny Kelly, Bill McMahon and Ellison Brown, all will make their Olympic bows in the classic distance race, but it's doubtful if they have more than an outside chance. Japan has carefully primed for the event, because of the special honors attached to the conquest in it, and has a trio capable of challenging the defending champion, Juan Carlos Zabala, of Argetnina.

Nats Win, 9 to 3, Over Browns; Take Third

Tigers and 10 games behind the Yanks.

By the time the Nats swung into action, the Browns were leading 2-0. Lyn Lary's triple that opened the game was converted into a run for the Browns and in the second inning Bottomley scored after reaching third on Kress' wild throw. He was safe on a dash to the plate when Whitehill dropped a throw from Millies, who recovered the ball.

Whitehill Scores Run.

Whitehill himself drove in the Nats' first run after Kress and Bluege had singled in the second, but the Browns made it 3-1 in the fifth, performing the feat of scoring only one run on four hits.

Jesse Hill sounded the start of the Nats' onslaught against Hogsett in the fifth with a double to left. He went to third on Lewis' cheap hit down the first-base line, and when Hogsett hit Lewis with the ball Hill scored on the error. After Kuhel had forced Lewis, Chapman singled to center, Travis singled to center and Bluege produced a double against the left center fence that drove in the third and fourth runs of the inning.

They bounced right back at Hogsett in the sixth after Hill walked. Lewis beat out a hit to Lary, Kuhel bashed a single to right, and so did Chapman, and the Nats were in front, 8-3.

Ossie Bluege drove in another run in the eighth, but with Whitehill holding the Browns scoreless after the fifth it was as superfluous as Roosevelt's official notification of his nomination.

Cubs Win Over Giants, 1 to 0; Take Lead

Bill Lee Wins Mound Duel With Hubbell; Winners Get Two Hits.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 13.—With Bill Lee outpitching Carl Hubbell and Frank Gabler in a pitching duel, the Chicago Cubs today defeated the New York Giants 1 to 0 to gain first place in the National League with a margin of three percentage points over the idle Cardinals.

The Cubs made only two hits off the combined hurling of Hubbell and Gabler while Lee was yielding four, but the National League champions took advantage of one of their blows to score the only run of the game in the fourth inning. Bill Herman led off by drawing a pass. Augie Galan sacrificed, and when Burgess Whitehead threw wild past second, Herman went on to third.

Hartnett Hurts Finger.

Then Ken O'Dea, who had taken over the catching job when Gabby Hartnett hurt his finger in the second inning, came through with a timely single. The other blow, made in the fifth by Phil Cavarretta, went to waste.

The Giants got a hit in each of the first, fourth, fifth and sixth frames, but only Gus Mancuso, who led off the fifth with a double, got as far as third and then via an infield out. Hubbell was lifted for a pinch-hitter in the seventh and Gabler pitched the last two innings.

Overlin is now signed to fight in Asheville next week and in Lancaster, Pa., with Joe Smallwood on July 27.

Tigers Defeat Macks Again By 5 to 2

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, July 13.—The Detroit Tigers again beat the Athletics today for their tenth triumph in 12 games with the A's and their second straight in the current series, the score was 5 to 2.

Detroit took an early 4 to 0 lead and held it while Roxie Lawson scattered the A's nine hits. Charley Gehringer's double and Goose Goslin's single in the third accounted for the winning tally.

Glenn Myatt, veteran catcher acquired from Montreal, caught Lawson and singled in the second scoring Walker with the first run of the game.

Boston, July 13.—The Cleveland Indians continued their heavy slugging today as they pounded out 17 hits, five of them for extra bases, and defeated the Boston Red Sox 11 to 3 for their three straight victory.

Ring Defects Held Suicide For Ross

D. C. Fighter's Trainer Says He's Learned Way to Win.

By Bill McCormick.

Harry Groves, trainer of District Welterweight Champion Phil Furr, yesterday revealed some of the weaknesses he has discovered in the form of World Welterweight Champion Barney Ross which he believes will make it possible for his charge to beat the ring's outstanding figure when they clash at Griffith Stadium July 22.

"Naturally enough, I'm not going to tell you all I have learned about Ross' style," said Groves, who had ample opportunity to observe Barney in Chicago. "But, there are certain fundamental weaknesses in his form that he could not correct in the length of time left before he fights Phil."

"In the first place, Ross always throws more than one left hand jab, but seldom more than three in succession, then he crosses with a right. After he has thrown his last left, he invariably drops his left shoulder to set for the right-hand wallop—and that's one time Phil will be able to nail him with his Sunday punch."

"Ross also has another very glaring defect," insists Harry. "He jabs to the body, which is suicide against a right-hand puncher. Just how dangerous a left jab to the body is against a good right-hand walloper was demonstrated in one of old Sam Langford's last battles.

"It seems that old Sam was fighting Tiger Flowers, then a young and promising southpaw. In the first round, the Tiger nearly murdered Sam. The Tar Baby came back to his corner and his seconds bent very anxiously over him.

"'Sam, are you all right?' they asked him. 'Git ouah stuff ready. Ah think weah goin' home. This boy is makin' mistakes—an' if he keep on makin' 'em, weah leavin.'

"Sure enough, in the second round, Flowers jabbed to the body—and Sam knocked him cold with a left to the head. Ross not being a southpaw, will prove a sucker for a right when he jabs to the body."

Furr to date has worked more rounds for this fight than for any previous bout in his career. He will continue heavy work until he feels he has reached his peak.

Ross continues to work out daily in Chicago. He will come here within the next day or two, but his arrival is being delayed pending establishment of an outdoor training site.

Everett Gets Nod Over Al Delaney

That, plus his advantage in courage, was all he needed against Delaney. Just to make Everett's edge even more decisive, it developed early in the milling that Delaney could not absorb body punches—a fact which Everett took advantage of to send Al back to his corner on rubber legs at the finish of several rounds.

Mello Bettina, New York lightheavyweight, punched his way to a unanimous decision over Charley Loughran, borther of the famous Tommy, in a six-round semifinal. Against the cagey, wily Loughran, Bettina impressed as one of the best punchers for his weight that has been shown in these parts since Joe Knight was more or less a fixture here.

Preliminaries.

Stanford Carrier, local welterweight, won an unpopular decision over Frankie Cavanna, of New York, in a rather slow six-round preliminary.

Tony Stanzey, Philadelphia, won a six-round decision from Doug. Swetnam, Washington, in a featherweight preliminary.

Luther Untz won the Judges' award from Wild William Howell in a four-round middleweight curtain-raiser.

C. U. SOFTBALL LEAGUE.

The Orioles took the lead in the St. Anthony's Softball League yesterday by winning a 2-to-1 victory from the Unknowns on the Catholic University practice field. A home run by Gheen in the ninth inning gave the Orioles their victory and ended a pitching duel between Cashell, of the Orioles, and Boace. The former allowed four hits. Boache yielded six hits and fanned ten men.

Riggs Moves Up In Clay Court Net Play

Prep School Youth Wins 2 Matches to Advance to Third Round.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 13.—Robert Riggs, national junior and clay court titleholder and coholder of the national clay courts doubles championship, seeded No. 1, featured the third session of the ninth annual men's Eastern clay courts championships at the Jackson Heights Club today.

Riggs, an 18-year-old prep school boy who hails from Los Angeles, was forced to start late because of the Spring Lake, N. J., invitation which he lost to Frank Parker yesterday. He won his first-round match from Richard B. Todd, Jackson Heights, 6—0, 6—0, then defeated Eugene Lambert, the last of the four Kenyon College, Ohio, entrants, by the same scores.

The foreign seeded list of five was pared down to one as Guy Cheng, Chinese Davis Cup star, dropped his second-round match to Bryan Hamlin, Bridge Hampton, Long Island, 6—3, 6—2. Lewis Duff, Montreal, Canada, was the other foreign player to go. Robert Kelleher, Forest Hills, Long Island, measured the Canadian, 6—3, 3—6, 6—4. Fernandez Morrell, Cuba, is the remaining foreign star.

Morrell, who was mistaken for Ricardo Morales, Cuban Davis Cup player, when the tournament began, was definitely located today as a Cuban who is a member of the Georgia School of Technology tennis squad.

German Tennis Stars to Seek U.S. Title

Baron Von Cramm to Lead Four Topnotch Nazi Aces' Invasion.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 13.—Four of Germany's topnotch tennis players will challenge for the American singles and doubles championship this summer, the United States Lawn Tennis Association announced today.

Three men stars, topped by the celebrated Baron Gottfried von Cramm and including Heiner Henkel and Karl Lund, and Fraulein Marie Louise Horn, Germany's No. 2 woman ace, will compose the invading group.

They are expected to arrive in New York about the middle of August and will enter the national doubles championship tournament at Longwood, Mass., August 24-29. They will return to New York immeditaely afterward and start practice at Forest Hills for the national singles championships, September 3-12.

Fraulein Horn commanded international recognition during the recent all-England championships at Wimbledon where she defeated Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, of Brookline, Mass., 6—3, 7—5, in the first round.

GUM-DIPPED TIRES

— SAYS Ab Jenkins

WORLD-FAMOUS DRIVER

THE MASTERPIECE OF TIRE CONSTRUCTION

THERE is a reason why Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires—the Masterpiece of Tire Construction—hold more records for safety, speed, mileage and endurance, than all other makes of tires combined. They are the only tires built with a Gum-Dipped cord body.

Ab Jenkins subjected Firestone Tires to the most severe test ever known on the Bonneville salt flats, the world's fastest speedway. He established 77 world's records on Firestone Tires, driving up to 153 miles per hour without tire trouble of any kind. He has also driven more than a million miles on Firestone Tires—in practically every state in the Union, on all kinds of roads, in all kinds of weather—all without tire trouble and without accident.

Only Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires could stand such a gruelling grind. Gum-Dipping, the Firestone patented process that prevents internal friction and heat, is the secret of the extra strength and reserve safety built into Firestone Tires.

You, of course, will never drive your car at 153 miles per hour on the highway, but at today's higher speeds you do need tires that will give you greatest blowout protection, that will stop your car up to 25% quicker, and that will give you 50% longer non-skid mileage. Take no chances! It costs so little to protect lives worth so much. Equip your car with Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires—the safest tires that money can buy!

Suffolk Purse Won by Mr. Pete

Closing Rally Gains Purse In Thriller

Buster Boy Taken Wide After Poor Start; Wilts Near End.

By the Associated Press.

Suffolk Downs, Boston, July 13.—Continuing where his stablemate, Time Supply, left off Saturday, Frank A. Carreaud's Mr. Pete won the Cambridge Purse, mile and a sixteenth claiming feature, by a neck over B. N. Kane's Sand Baby in the slow time of 1:46.1 before a crowd of 15,000 on hand to witness the wash-day program.

Third was Miss L. C. White's Buster Boy, that trailed the second horse by a half a length while holding show money from T. S. and J. S. Mulvihill's Mountainy Man.

The winner brought $15 in the mutuels, Sand Baby $6.80 to place, and Buster Boy $6.60 to show.

Mr. Pete was first out of the gate, but was taken back off the pace early, and it was Buster Boy that led the field into the backstretch. Mountainy Man, that held up the start at the gate and had to be taken to the outside, after getting away poorly caught the leaders on the far turn. The effort tired him, however, and he was unable to stick with the first flight in the drive for home.

SAND BABY was not hurried during the opening half mile, began moving up gradually thereafter and closed with good energy. BUSTER BOY went to the front straightening out on the backstretch and was unable to keep pace when challenged in the closing furlong. MOUNTAINY MAN, unruly at the post, moved up gamely on the outside in the run down the backstretch, weakening in the last quarter mile. EVEN UP, trailing early, closed a big gap. PLUCKY BABY had early speed, dropping back after going a half mile and came again in the stretch. LADY FLINDERS was never able to reach the leaders.

FEZ was not hurried during the early running, moved up stoutly on the outside after rounding the far turn, took command before reaching the stretch and drew out steadily, winning as if much the best. MISS GINBAR moved up fast on the outside. Idle Along, a good early lead and, while unable to keep pace with the winner, outlasted BE JUST for the place. The latter was well placed all the way though unable to keep pace under intermittent punishment. SQUAWKER was taken up repeatedly in the running and was never a threat. MAKEIT tired. SWAP broke down.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ALLENFERN, $5.20, $3.20, $2.40; ZEMBLA, $3.60, $2.60; SUN ABBOT, $3.00.

ALLENFERN took command at once, surrendered the lead to GET READY when straightening out on the backstretch, moved to the front again when ready, drew away into a good lead and held sway to the end. ZEMBLA moved up stoutly in the run down the backstretch and was unable to reach the winner in the stretch drive. SUN ABBOT improved his position gradually and closed a good cap though never a threat to the leading pair in the closing test. BELOW COST was prominently placed though unable to make up any ground when called upon when the real test came. YENOOR tired. GET READY dropped back fast in the last half mile.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 6:08. Off at 6:08½. Winner, Mrs. Mat Ray's ch. m. FLAXEN, restrained in pursuit of the early pacemaker, moved up stoutly when leaving the backstretch, took command when RUTLAND began tiring and, opening up a good lead, was never threatened. PENRILL, restrained for the first half mile, closed determinedly in the stretch run. THATCH began moving up in the last 3 furlongs and closed willingly on the outside in the stretch run. PALATINE made up some ground after trailing the first 5 furlongs. RUTLAND had good speed in pacemaking, weakened badly after reaching the stretch. GRAMARYE had early speed, stopping badly in the last half mile.

Rally Halts Swift Decline In Wheat Price

Buying Wave Sets in After 4-Cent Break in Wheat and Corn.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 13.—Sensationally swift wide price changes that included almost 4-cents - a - bushel breaks both for wheat and corn today ended as a virtual drawn battle. Strong rallies were in progress in all grains at the last, influenced by indications that for at least the time being there had been nearly a complete fizzling-out of expected relief from crop damage by excessive high temperatures and by prolonged dearth of moisture.

A conspicuous stimulating factor as the day's unusually big volume of transactions approached a finish was an authoritative official estimate that Canada's wheat yield would be slashed to 225,000,000 bushels, approximately cut in half from recent suggestions of 400,000,000 bushels. The unofficial estimate followed a Canadian government report of a curtailment to 250,000,000 bushels.

Wheat closed nervous, ¼ to 1¼ under Saturday's latest level; July, 103¼; September, 103⅞ to 104; December, 105¼ to 105⅝; corn, ¾ down to 1¼ up; July, 84⅝ to 84¾; September, 81⅞ to 82½; December, 76⅝ to 76¾. Oats unchanged to ⅝ higher; September, 38½ to 38⅝. Rye, ¼ to ⅜ off; September, 70 to 70¼. The result in provisions varied from 17 cents decline to an advance of 2 cents.

Rails and Farm Implements Lead Advance in Active Trading; Bonds Firm.

New York, July 13.—Led by rails and the farm implement shares, the stock market advanced on a ragged front today, reaching new high prices in many issues. Drought relief caused a setback in grains at the same time that the agricultural group was climbing from 2 to 6 points. Steel activity moved up moderately and railroad carloadings continued to show gains, but otherwise the day was barren of special business or corporate news developments. Stock turnover of about 1,500,000 shares was the second largest of the month. Bonds were quiet and firm.

J. I. Case was more than 6 points higher, and Harvester and Deere were up 2 or 3 points. Montgomery Ward and Sears Roebuck shared the gain, Sears reaching a new high.

One to three points were added to Santa Fe, which crossed $30; Baltimore & Ohio, Delaware & Hudson, Great Northern, Pennsylvania, Southern Pacific and Union Pacific, Chesapeake & Ohio continued into new high ground.

Electrical equipment shares were in demand, Westinghouse crossing the $130 level for the first time since 1930 on a rise of nearly 3 points. The advance was helped along by reports of a shortage in dealer stocks of electric fans as a result of extraordinary demand. General Electric was moderately higher.

Utilities were mixed. Consolidated Edison duplicated the year's best price, but ran into profit taking that sent it off a substantial fraction. Public Service rose about a point. Recent favorites in the group were steady.

Du Pont reached a new high. Independent steels were higher while U. S. Steel receded and Bethlehem backed and filled around the previous close. Motors traded in reduced volume with a narrow range.

The Paris markets were closed for today and tomorrow, but that did not prevent sharp advances in the franc here and in London, presumably because no developments of an alarming nature had occurred over the week-end in France. The riots there proved not as serious as had been feared. The supply of francs was a bit short and the advance which occurred was accomplished on small volume. On Wednesday Frenchmen will have to report their foreign balances to their government, but foreign exchange men predicted that preparations of this kind probably had been completed long ago and that any efforts by Frenchmen to liquidate foreign holdings at the eleventh hour probably would have no important effect upon the markets.

Tax Relief.

The following letter dated July 1 from the village treasurer has been framed by a Wall Street resident of Roslyn Harbor: "To the taxpayers of Roslyn Harbor: It gives me pleasure to say that, for this year, there will be no village tax. Since the incorporation of the village, the mayor and trustees, by close economy and careful oversight of expenditures, have effected a budget saving each year, which, being cumulative, is now sufficient to cover the village expenses of the current year, without curtailment of necessary maintenance and other expenditures. While, obviously, assessments will be required in future years, we are of the opinion that they will continue to decline in percentage and amount."

Rail Earnings.

Although official reports have not begun to appear, the Interstate Commerce Commission releases a summary of estimated operating revenues of 64 class I railroads for the month of June showing an increase of 5.9 per cent over a year ago in passenger revenue in the Eastern district for 27 roads. This increase is smaller than in other sections; Pocahontas region, two roads gained 9.2 per cent; Southern region, 15 roads gained 15.5 per cent; Western district, 20 roads gained 19.6 per cent. Nevertheless the Eastern gain from $13,240,700 to $14,026,297 for the first month of sharply reduced fares, must be considered favorable. The ICC did not summarize the regional reports because the astern district was more complete than others, but total operating revenue of the 64 roads was up from $170,500,000 to $195,200,000 or 14.5 per cent.

Excess Reserves.

Currency was reported coming back from circulation at a more rapid pace today and the outlook for the close of business Wednesday is for excess reserves to go above the $3,000,000,000 figure. Treasury disbursements of ordinary character and the special disbursements in connection with the cashing of bonus bonds are the principal factors, with some currency retirement, in putting excess funds higher.

Boston Wool Market.

Boston, July 13 (AP).—(U. S. Dept. of Agric.).—Business in wool on the Boston market was slow and sentiment rather mixed. Some houses were willing to sell short French combing lengths of inferior, longer staple fine territory wool in original bags at prices slightly under 80 cents scoured basis. Good French combing staple wools of similar grades were being held at around 85 cents scoured basis. In a few cases or urgent immediate requirements scoured's paid up to 85 cents scoured basis for fair weights and average to good French combing fine original territory wool. An occasional house expressed a sentiment of increased confidence as a result of the inquiries received.

Swedish Firm Obtains Kreuger Assets in International Match Co.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 13.—In six minutes by transatlantic telephone today certain assets of International Match Co., one of the defunct Ivar Kreuger properties, valued roughly at $13,000,000, formally were transferred to Swedish Match Co. at the Enskilda Bank in Stockholm.

At the same time Irving Trust Co. as trustee for American creditors who originally had invested $100,000,000 in International Match, acknowledged receipt of $8,766,000 in cash and 900,000 shares of Swedish Match "B" stock. The stock, at the time the offer was approved, was valued at roundly $4,000,000.

The ceremony, which wound up four years of negotiations, was elaborately carried out, nine representatives of American creditors having gone to Sweden to witness the closing while Swedish Match Co. representatives listened in on the Irving Trust Co. end of the conversation.

Previously $1,000,000 had been put up as bond by the foreign concern and an additional $1,000,000 was deposited to bind the transaction following approval by international creditors and court.

Following today's payment Irving Trust Co. has more than $10,000,000 in cash which it proposes to pay creditors as a liquidating dividend upon obtaining the necessary court approval. The trustee some time ago paid out $5,000,000 in such a manner.

Brown-Forman Sales Nearly Double in Year

Sales of the Brown-Forman Distillery Co., of Louisville, in the fiscal year ended April 30, almost doubled those in the preceding year, Owsley Brown, president, said yesterday in his annual report to stockholders.

As a result, the consolidated net profits rose from $30,971 in the 1935 fiscal year (after allowance for interest, taxes and other charges) to $475,062 in the last year, equal after preferred dividends to $1.92 per share on the 200,000 shares of $1 par common stock outstanding. The balance sheet as of April 30 shows current assets of $4,140,068 and current liabilities of $2,509,224, which included a bank loan of $1,855,544 largely to expand inventories necessary to take care of the growth in business.

Refined Sugar Cut To 4.75 Cents a Pound

New York, July 13 (AP).—A reduction of ¼ of a cent a pound in the price of refined sugar was posted by several Eastern refiners today, bringing it to 4.75 cents a pound for 7-day shipment.

This was the first reduction since March and was followed by a similar step by a prominent West Coast refiner. Midwest beet sugar refiners lowered their quotation to 4.55 cents, against 4.70 previously quoted.

Bond Issue Change Is Forced by SEC

By the Associated Press.

First use of the Securities and Exchange Commission's power to change the conditions of a public bond issue was reported at the commission yesterday in connection with an issue planned by the Sioux City (Iowa) Gas & Electric Co.

Commission attorneys said today, as a result of co-operation in prolonged negotiations, substantial changes had been made in company's plans for $10,500,000 of bonds and debentures. The company agreed that so long "as any of the debentures are outstanding no cash dividends may be declared or paid on any class of stock except out of earned surplus accruing subsequent to July 1, 1936.

In addition, it was said, the debenture issue has been closed against the issuance of additional debentures, and a maintenance and renewal fund to safeguard the bonds has been decided upon. Neither was included in the original plan.

Cotton Mill Sales Exceed Production

New York, July 13.—The cotton manufacturing industries of this country and England continue to enjoy unusually favorable conditions, by comparison with those that have prevailed during recent years, and they constitute two of the most important sections of the world cotton-spinning industry contributing to the current high rate of world cotton consumption, according to the New York Cotton Exchange Service.

"For practically seven successive weeks," says the Exchange Service, "mills of this country have sold more than their current output of cloth. In consequence, mills have greatly reduced their stocks of unsold goods and have built up a good backlog of unfilled orders which seems to assure a high rate of mill activity for some months."

Treasury Acts To Put Budget Up-to-Minute

President Expected to Offer Analysis; Submission Due in Month.

By the Associated Press.

An up-to-the-minute summation of the budget—the first complete statement of the Government's financial prospects for the current fiscal year—was in preparation yesterday at the Treasury.

It is to be made public about a month hence, officials said, after President Roosevelt returns to the Capital. It probably will be accompanied by an analysis of, and comment on, the figures by the Chief Executive.

Such a procedure was inaugurated a year ago when, for the first time, the budget was revised following the adjournment of Congress to align it with all appropriations or changes in the tax law and new estimates of governmental income.

This time, the revision must reckon with an increased number of uncertainties which have entered the budget situation since Mr. Roosevelt sent his regular budget message to Congress in January.

That budget was assertedly incomplete, containing no estimate for relief beyond a statement that certain unexpended balances would be used for that purpose. On the day it was read in Congress the Supreme Court invalidated the agricultural processing taxes, creating a half-billion dollar gap in revenues.

Later, Congress ordered the soldiers' bonus paid at a cost now estimated from $1,700,000,000 to $2,000,000,000. In addition it enacted a tax bill putting corporation taxes on an entirely new basis, aimed at watching a portion of the otherwise remitted processing taxes and, as of the time of passage, expected to produce about $800,000,000 this fiscal year.

In addition, officials said today, the developments of the business world in the six months since the January budget went to Congress have necessitated a revision of the estimated yield of individual income taxes and other levies which were undisturbed by the new tax bill.

The January budget, without including relief, forecast a total expenditure of $5,649,000,000 and total receipts of $5,654,000,000 for the fiscal year, which began July 1. For relief, Congress later appropriated $1,425,000,000. Of the expected total cost of the bonus $724,000,000 was paid off in the last fiscal year, leaving a billion or so to fall this period.

death as he boasted—"like an Apache."

His iron nerve never faltered, not even during the five hours he was kept sitting in an automobile, 25 yards from the abandoned rock crusher that had been converted into a gallows.

He walked to the scaffold with a sure step, stood quietly while Henry C. Smith, deputy marshal, read the lengthy death warrant, by flashlight, and said as a last statement: "I'm glad to get it over with."

Body Slips.

A hired executioner pulled the wooden lever which sprang the trap at 5:06 a. m.

Gardner's body slipped against the side of the trap, breaking the fall.

For many minutes he groaned terribly as the noose which had slipped in front of his ear, slowly choked him.

The physician made repeated examinations of the body, returning from the trap's pit each time, shaking his head and reporting that Gardner still lived, finally, 33 minutes later, he informed Marshal McKinney the Indian was dead.

Gardner was taken secretly from the Gila County Jail, at Globe, 26 miles from the scene of execution, at 11 p. m. yesterday. Marshal McKinney and three other deputies, armed with a submachine gun and tear-gas bombs, took him immediately to the gallows.

Glacier Priest Reveals Rescue By Alaska's Dog Team Heroine

Father Hubbard, Wrecked in Rapids of Twin Glacier River, Saved When Mary Joyce Brings Aid; Steel Boat Lost in Accident.

By the Associated Press.

Juneau, Alaska, July 13.—The chance arrival of a motorboat fishing party led by Mary Joyce, Alaska's attractive "lady musher," helped save Father Bernard Hubbard when his boat was wrecked recently in the icy rapids of Twin Glacier River, the priest explorer disclosed today.

Miss Joyce, who drove a dogteam 1,000 miles last midwinter to a Fairbanks ice carnival, had sailed with her party in their boat downstream to view the rapids.

"She was horrified, she told me later, to see a man on a rock and a wrecked boat in the raging waters," Father Hubbard said. "She ran their boat ashore and found George Gatty, a member of our expedition.

"He jumped in and piloted it downstream. I leaped into it as it swirled past and we soon were safe below the rapids."

Father Hubbard, describing the wrecking of the river boat from which he and Ken Chisholm, former Santa Clara football player, had leaped "by almost a miracle" onto a rock, said it was the first serious mishap in his ten years of Alaskan exploration. He gave great praise to Chisholm.

Father Hubbard's specially built lightweight steel boat and much valuable equipment were lost in the accident, which occurred last week. He ordered a new one shipped, but planned to return to the scene with a heavily built wooden riverboat he bought here.

"With the high water aiding us we had gone through the rapids both ways several times and all but the last load of our tons of equipment was safe at our island base camp," said the University of Santa Clara priest.

Dogs Are Freed.

"The last trip our propeller sheared a rock. Our heavily loaded boat hit and turned over. We managed to unsnap the chains of Mageik and Magook, our sled dogs, and jumped."

Ice floes were swirling down the rapids and their position appeared precarious. Chisholm volunteered to try to swim the rapids. Taking off his boots and shirt, he received the priest's blessing and plunged in.

"He went under twice, but chilled and numb, made shore and ran through the forest to camp, Father Hubbard related.

His shouts aroused Nicholas Cavaliere, cameraman, and John Dimond, his assistant, and they returned with ropes and axes. With night coming on, two hours later, Miss Joyce's boat appeared.

Family of Four Killed

of the old frame house and smothered the flames.

Mrs. Smallwood was divorced 15 years ago from the son of Sheriff W. W. Smallwood, of Clarke County. Her husband, it was said, is living now in Pennsylvania.

No outsiders heard the shots. The tragedy, Dr. Osborne said, occurred between 5 and 6 a. m. He said Mrs. Elsea could not have lived more than a few minutes after she was wounded.

The two young boys, the coroner said, probably were killed while they slept. Mrs. Elsea, bedridden from a long illness, probably was awake when she was shot.

According to the investigator's reconstruction of the tragedy, Mrs. Smallwood fired the beds and then shoved the barrel of the shotgun under her left arm and fired. She must have staggered several steps, the doctor said.

The bodies were not badly burned, however, Mrs. Ami Kelly said. Mrs. Kelly is a kinswoman of the Smallwoods.

Dr. Osborne said Mrs. Smallwood probably was unbalanced at the time of the triple murder and suicide. He added that the woman had been in ill health for a long time and said he expected witnesses at the inquest to testify to that effect.

Mrs. Kelly called the coroner as soon as she learned about the deaths. The coroner was not in town and Dr. Osborne was summoned instead.

Commonwealth's Attorney Williams, who also investigated, found all the doors barred. The beds, he said, were soaked with coal oil and the wound which Mrs. Smallwood received appeared to be self-inflicted. Smudges of powder burns substantiated the theory.

Investigating officers think Mrs. Smallwood killed her eldest son first. As the shot reverberated through the house, they think, Alfred awoke. His mother fired at him hurriedly and, thinking in her haste she might have failed to kill him, fired again.

She left her dying son and stalked downstairs. She pointed the single-barreled shotgun at the chest of her mother, fired and wounded her fatally. Next, she set fire to the beds.

Then she killed herself.

Texas Region Stirred By 'Disappearing Body'

Round Rock, Tex., July 13 (AP).—A "disappearing body" mystery gripped this community today.

Quincy Surber reported to officers he saw the body of a man Thursday night on the E. J. Walsh ranch. When officers went back with him, the body was nowhere in sight. But they did find a blood-stained rock, a hat and a pair of shoes.

Officers theorized that the man, apparently beaten, recovered consciousness and staggered away. Sheriff J. B. Arnold, after examining the hat and shoes, concluded that the missing man was Bryan Black, Skidmore civil engineer.

But today a new light was cast on the mystery. E. J. Walsh, sr., and his son saw buzzards circling over a water hole. Investigation led to the discovery of a bloody shirt and a white belt beside the water hole and a bloody trail leading into it.

17 Guards Seized In Kidnap-Murder

By the Associated Press.

Madrid, July 13 (AP).—Seventeen Spanish assault guards were arrested and held for questioning tonight in the kidnap-murder of Jose Calvo Sotelo, one of the country's most powerful monarchist leaders.

The guard members belonged to the company of the slain assault guard captain, Jose de Castillo, slain last night by alleged Fascists.

Although an official version of Calvo's death was lacking, the Claridad, Socialist paper, asserted the assassins belonged to Capt. Castillo's company and expressed the belief the members lost their heads and decided to avenge their captain's death by slaying Calvo.

The Communist minority in the Cortes (Parliament) decided to demand the suppression of Rightist newspapers and the dissolution of Rightist political parties as a result of the slaying.

After a day-long session the cabinet issued a note appealing for tranquillity of all citizens.

Ohio Steel Workers Receive Wage Raises

Steubenville, Ohio, July 13 (AP).—Nine hundred of the 1,100 employes of the Follansbee Brothers Steel Co. received a wage boost today.

William Lake, general manager, announced the increase along with $1,000,000-improvement program at the company's Toronto, Ontario, and Follansbee, W. Va., plants.

A receivership, under which the company had operated for two years, will be dissolved August 15 and a new board of directors named, Lake said.

Effective as of July 1, the wage increase amounted to 10 per cent of previous cuts.

Culbertson on Bridge

Leaving in Doubles.

When you have opened the bidding on shaded values, the next hand has overcalled in a suit, and your partner has doubled for penalties, the greatest consideration in whether or not you should leave in the double is your holding in the doubled suit itself. You need have no qualms over the fact that your bid advertised slightly greater general strength, if you are prepared to assist partner in his attack on that most vital spot, the trump suit. A queen, even a jack of trumps can easily take on the value of an outside ace.

In today's hand South was afraid that his questionable vulnerable bid had misled his partner into a dangerous double. He should have given greater consideration to his own holding in the opponents' suit.

North, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

NORTH
♠ K 10 8 7 6
♥ K 3

WEST

♦ J 8 6 5 3

SOUTH
♠ Q 9
♥ J 10 9 6 5
♦ A 7 4
♣ A 8 2

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 heart	1 spade
Double	Pass	2 hearts	Pass
2 no trump	Pass	Pass	Pass

South's take-out of the penalty double was ill advised and the sterile outcome (making nine tricks at no trump but no game, since the contract had been for only two odd) made him feel even sillier. It is quite possible, of course, that West would have wriggled out of the bad spot he was in at one spade doubled, by bidding a no trump, which his partner undoubtedly would have rescued with two diamonds. But West was the stubborn type of player, and the chances were he would have stuck by his guns. At any rate, South should have made him rescue himself and not played the good Samaritan. The Q-9 of spades in South's hand were (as he should have seen) powerful cards, fully the equal of an outside trick. Moreover, even if the worst should happen, and West were to make his one spade doubled contract, the damage would be slight, no game being involved. On the other hand, South risked a great deal by taking out the double, considering his weak suit. For all he knew, two hearts might court slaughter, with North unable to rescue.

The damage to one spade doubled (had South and West both passed) would have been severe. North should open the jack of clubs (the safest possible lead) despite his partner's heart bid. With that opening West easily could be held to four tricks—one club, one heart and two trumps.

South's timidity, therefore, probably cost him and his partner 700 points, an 800 point penalty less the 100 points actually made at the two no trump contract.
